SLAVS SEND NEW TROOPS INTO FRANCE

SIXTH CONTINGENT OF RUSSIAN SOLDIERS FOR WEST FRONT DISEMBARK TODAY AT BREST.

FIGHT IN CHAMPAIGN

Russian Troops Now Fighting In Trenches on French Line Give a Good Account of Themselves.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, April 17.—A contingent of Russian troops disembarked today at Brest, France. They will be sent to camp from Brest and later to the front.

This is the sixth contingent of Russian troops the arrival of which in France has been reported. Between April 20 and May 5 there arrived at Marseilles five bodies of Russian soldiers after a land and sea journey of 17,500 miles from Moscow, where they were sent to Port Dalny, Manchuria, and thence by water via the Suez canal. The number of men in the first five contingents has not been given officially, but is believed to be about 25,000. These troops were quartered at Camp de Mailly, near Troyes, for several weeks, and then sent to the front.

Slavs Fight In Champagne.

The official French communication of last night showed Russian troops were in trenches in the Champagne.

It was said in Paris several weeks ago the sending of the first contingent was largely in the nature of an experiment, and they might be followed by more substantial numbers. On a former occasion the Russians arrived without arms, which were supplied by the French. The explanation was given it was easier to send men out of Russia's surplus to the western front than to forward arms and ammunition to the east.

Attacks in Lorraine were delivered southeast of Nomeny.

West of Fleury the French made some progress, taking three machine guns. A raid on a trench in the Champagne occupied by Russian troops, was led successfully by a counter attack causing heavy loss to the Germans.

On the Verdun front the night was comparatively calm except in the vicinity of Hill 304, where rifle firing was brisk.

Attacks In Lorraine.

The Germans made two attacks in Lorraine last night. The war office report of today says both assaults were repulsed.

Bombardment Starts.

London, July 17.—An artillery bombardment of intense violence is in progress at many points from the Somme district north to the sea on the western front, the war office announced today, the German line being heavily pounded by the British guns.

Second Line Position.

German second line positions northwest of Bazentin-le-Petit wood have been captured by the British in a stormy attack, the war office announced today. The positions captured, in what the statement characterized as a "further important success," extended over a front of 1,500 yards.

Capture Trench.

British front in France, July 17.—The British today captured a German trench in the neighborhood of Poziers. The capture of the trench strengthens the new British line in this vicinity.

The British also cleared out nests of German machine gun operators who had been holding out in cellars and behind barracks in the ruins of Ovillers and La Boisselle. Otherwise the situation along the British front is unchanged at this time.

A total of about 100 officers and men surrendered to the British, who have steadily closed in upon them using bombs and trench mortars, the Germans being short of food.

Care for German Wounded.

In an enormous cellar at Bazentin-le-Petit, the British found several hundred Germans who had taken refuge there. It was tragic business for the British litter bearers bringing them back through the German shell fire which was meant for the British reserves and gun positions. There were cases where a litter bearer was wounded, and two put on a stretcher [illegible] when a German in it had been killed by the same shell.

The British persisted until all who had not received a wound in transit were safe in the rear. A captured record of a German battalion shows [illegible]600 of its number were killed or wounded by the British shell fire in the bombardment before the attacks began.

Russian Successes.

Petrograd, July 17.—The Russians are continuing their successful advance in Lipa, the war office announced today. The number of prisoners taken by the Russians in Volhynia was nearly 13,000.

Announce Withdrawal.

Berlin, July 17.—A withdrawal of German troops under General Von Linsingen, southwest of Lutsk, to a point behind the river Lipa, is officially announced by the war office today.

Heavy Slav Losses.

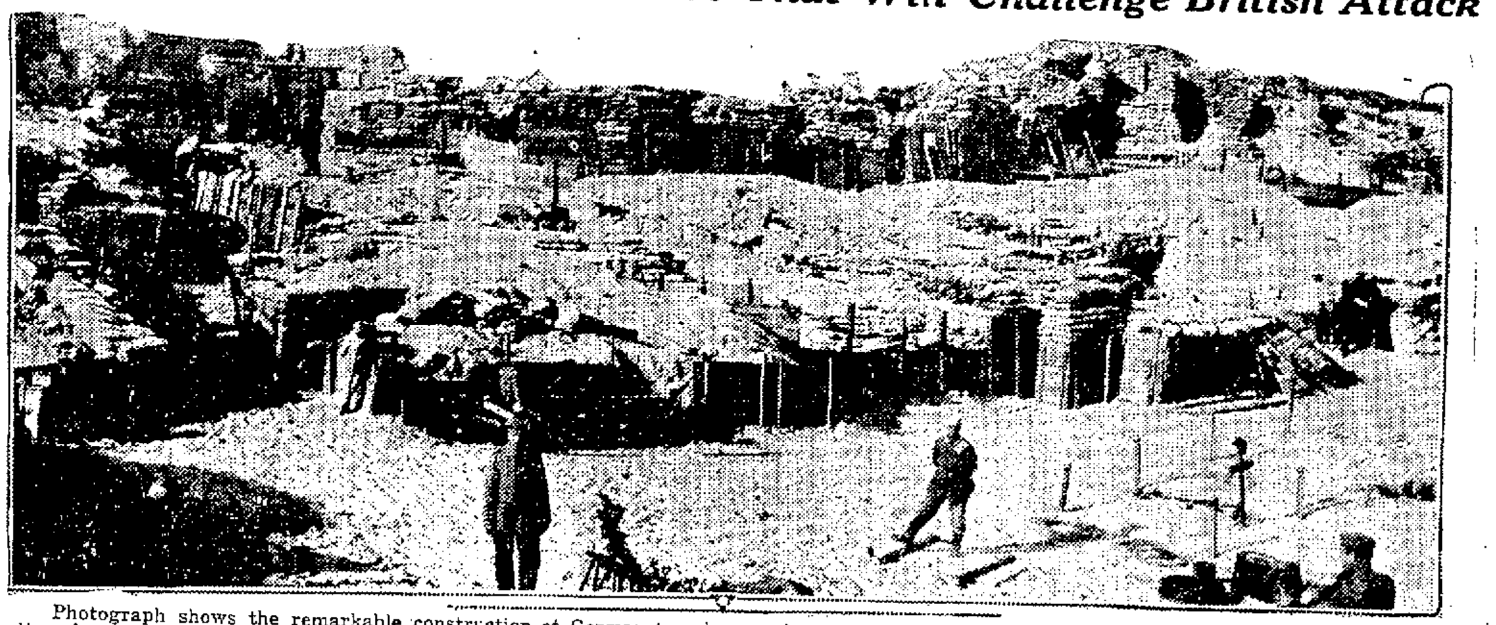
Berlin, via wireless, July 17.—"According to official reports from Petrograd," says the Overseas News Agency, "in the period between the beginning of the Russian offensive and July 1st, the number of those killed reached 14,900 officers, and 248,[illegible] men. Included among the officers were seventeen generals and twenty-[illegible] regimental commanders.

"Advices from Stockholm say that the Russian finance minister, having failed to obtain a loan from England and France, undertook negotiations with bankers in the United States, which also failed. England declared that the cost of the war to herself had reached such a point it had become impossible to assist her allies. The Russian newspaper, the Rech, commenting on this situation, most violently insults Americans for their "[illegible]ism," saying that at last "the masks of sympathy for the allies have been torn from their faces."

CHAIRMAN OF ENGINEERS' COMMITTEE DIES SUDDENLY AT LA CROSSE, WIS.

La Crosse, Wis., July 17.—Wm. C. [illegible], 53, of St. Paul, chairman of the committee of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, died at ten o'clock last night of heart failure.

Type of German Trench in Flanders That Will Challenge British Attack



Photograph shows the remarkable construction of German trenches on the sands of a beach on the extreme seacoast of Flanders. Bombproof shelters have also been built out of timber work, sand, and sand bags. This is a new and "different" picture of trenches over which the allies may hav to work.

GERMAN WOUNDED CRY "KILL US"---HE DID

Harvard Man Back from Verdun Tells of Frenchman's Compliance to German's Request.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Winchester, Mass., July 17.—John Sheehan, Harvard '11, back from the Verdun front with a medal of honor for courageous work as an ambulance driver in the American legion, today told this story of the battlefield as it was related to him by a French captain of Zouaves who lay mortally wounded in a base hospital:

Following one of the terriffic charges by the Boches up a shell swept slope held by the French, the field was strewn with dead and dying. Incessant artillery fire for three days before the final charge had pitted the hillside with huge shell-craters and had driven the French first line infantry back to the crest of the knoll.

Charge Three Times.

Then came the Germans, pouring out of their network of trenches, stumbling up the steep slopes and going down before the rifle fire of the French Zouaves. Three times the Boches attempted to gain the crest, and each time they were mowed down by a hail of lead, faling back to their lines in scatered groups.

When night came on and the German charge had been stayed, No Man's Land, between the French lines on the top of the hill and the Teutons' position on the plane below was piled high with dead and wounded; and the huge holes torn by the German shells were filled nearly level full with bodies.

Captain X had been in command of one of the first line trenches and his company had fallen back just before the charge, leaving many wounded behind. Among the latter was a lieutenant, a brother-in-law of the captains, with whom he had taken the oath of allegiance when their company was called to the colors.

Calling to a gigantic Zouave, known as the bravest man in his company, the captain told him he intended creeping down the bloody slope under cover of darkness, in the hope that he might rescue his comrade and asked the man to accompany him.

As they made their way down, inch by inch, for incendiary shells overhead lit up the sky from time to time, making them clear targets for the German guns, the Captain and his man passed hundreds of moaning, dying comrades and Germans; and their canteens wer nearly empty when they reached the trench they had once held.

Sight Is Horrible.

There, nearly dead from thirst and wounds, they found the lieutenant, half way up the side of a great hole torn by a 16 inch shell. In the darkness the Captain's flashlight lit up the crater with ghastly effect and he hastened to pass his comrade up to the Zouave, dimming his ears to the groans of the wounded all about him. As he himself started to ascend the slope a hand clutched his ankle and a voice in German begged:

"Kill us, kill us!"

Turning his flashlight toward the crater's bottom, Captain X saw there more than a dozen frightfully wounded Germans, gasping for water and several already dead from their sufferings.

Trying to draw away, he answered the German captain who had called to him, saying that he did not wish to kill them, that he could not do it in cold blood.

Then the Teuton Captain, his right-arm hanging in shreds, clung to him in desperation. He must kill them, in God's mercy he must. The hole in which they lay was not exposed to the fire of the combatants, but the Germans would never again attempt the desperate charge in which they had lost so heavily the afternoon before, and the French could not move from their impregnable position. It meant that he and all his men would lie there until they died from thirst or their wounds.

Ends Their Sufferings.

Captain X mopped the clammy sweat from his brow and thought of the awful torture of these men, enemies though they were, must endure, and then, deciding instantly, ordered his man to carry the Lieutenant on his back to the French lines and return with as many hand grenades as he could carry.

For nearly an hour he lay beside the top of the crater, with only an occasional scream of a shell over head to drown out the groans of the Germans.

Then the Zouave returned, and with a muttered prayer they threw the grenades down into the heap of Germans until the last cries were stilled.

New York, July 17.—Another shipment of approximately $20,000,000 in gold and securities, bringing the total up to $188,946,000 since the movement began, was received here today from London, via Halifax. The gold was deposited at the assay office to the account of J. P. Morgan & Company.

ORPET, FREE, FLEES WITH MOTHER; TRIP WILL BE A SECRET

No Longer a Public Figure, Says Father.—Needed But Three Ballots for Boy's Acquittal.

Lake Forest, Ill., July 17.—A morbid and curious crowd today continued to overrun the McCormick estate in hopes of a view of Will Orpet, who Saturday night was declared not guilty of the murder of Marian Lambert. They caught no sight of the University of Wisconsin student, either yesterday or today, however. He has been spirited away by his mother to live off the strain of the long ordeal of the murder trial which ended in his acquittal Saturday evening.

Yesterday no one but Orpet's father remained at home. Throughout the day was busy receiving congratulatory telegrams, telephone calls and letters from all parts of the country. He continually broke down and cried with joy because of the nature of the messages. All were addressed to Will.

The elder Orpet refused to divulge where his wife and son had gone. He treated newspapermen cheerfully, but firmly told them that the whereabouts of his son now was nobody's business. "When the trial was on Will was a public figure, but now he has been proven not guilty of the crime he was charged with and he is free. Why then should anyone know what my boy is doing or is going to do or where he is now."

Trial Ends.

Waukegan, July 17.—At 7:46 Saturday evening the Orpet jury led by a bailiff, entered the courtroom. Judge Donnelly, evidently expecting an early verdict, was seated on the courthouse steps smoking with several attorneys. But a few trial fans were left.

The jury did not enter its box, but lined up before the court's bench. Judge Donnelly received the verdict. He read it:

But three ballots were necessary to acquit Orpet.

The closing plea of the prosecution was completed shortly after noon. State's Attorney David R. Joslyn of McHenry county, made the final argument.

Instructs Jury.

When the prosecution had said its last word Judge Donnelly began instructing the jury. His instructions were favorable to the accused. He practically struck from the record every attempt the state has made to tear down the "boomerang" evidence of Josephine Davis, who took the stand as a state's witness and then testified strongly in favor of the defendant.

Flight Not Guilt.

The court insisted that the conviction of guilt in the minds of the jury go beyond all reasonable doubt if they bring in a verdict of guilty. He warned the jury against accepting Orpet's flight from the woods as an evidence of his guilt. This instruction was a severe blow since Attorney Joslyn had spent a large part of the morning striving to impress the jury that a man who had fled was a man who had killed.

Fifty-One Instructions.

Another warning of tremendous moment was that in which the court ordered the jury to beware of convicting the boy because of his relations with Marian Lambert before her death. This warning virtually drives from the record of the case the forty-four letters Will Orpet wrote to Marian Lambert, and which the state tried to use in painting him as the girl's murderer.

There were fifty-one instructions in all and most of them favored the defense and undermined the case of prosecution.

Big Crowd in Court.

Mr. Joslyn's closing plea was listened to by the greatest throng that has been present throughout the trial.

FLOOD ALONG COAST CRIPPLES FACTORIES

Scores of Industrial Plants in Carolinas Lay Idle As Result of High Water.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Asheville, N. C., July 17.—Scores of large industrial plants around Asheville lay idle today in the grip of the flood which followed last week's rainstorm and hurricane which swept in from the Carolina coast and flooded portions of North and South Carolina and adjacent territory of Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia. Fifty are missing and hundreds are homeless, while railroad service is virtually suspended on all sides of Asheville.

Eight Dead in Flood.

The death list from the flood that overwhelmed this section of North Carolina yesterday was increased to eight by more complete reports received today.

Reports from Madison county, which was cut off from wire communication for many hours, indicate that two lives were lost at Marshall, and that 53 houses were demolished in that little town. The water was receding today. The bodies of several nurses and two laborers were among those found today. The estimated damage is between six and ten million dollars.

The total resources of the 720 state banks in Wisconsin were, on June 30, 1916, $276,095,713.03. The savings deposits amounted to $179,411.91.

CONCERTED ATTACKS PUT GERMAN LINES TO A CRUCIAL TEST

Central Powers Are Fully Aware of Serious Situation Which Now Confronts Them.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

London, July 17.—The Daily Telegraph's Rotterdam correspondent quotes the military critic of Nieuw Rottersdamsche Courant, one of the most impartial and best informed of Dutch observers, as follows:

"The position of the central powers is very critical. They are now being attacked on all sides at once by superior forces. Withdrawal of forces from one part of a front to threatened points or concentration of superior forces at certain points in order to take the offensive can now only be used in a very limited manner.

"It is exactly in that in which lies the success of the allies. Simultaneous attack on all fronts, which has so long played a part in their conferences, has been brought to a reality. They have so perfected their organization of war on such far distant heterogeneous centers that they now are able to make full use of the circumstances that they are surrounuders of the central powers and are now really making use of the superior power they possess."

The Frankfurter Zeitung, one of the sanest German newspapers, says: "Nobody in Germany believes the battle is anything like ended and the storm brushed aside. The great offensive movement, whereby our enemies hope to break through our lines, is by no means at a standstill. This is sure and it is also sure that repeated masses of troops will be thrown against our lines.

"It is even impossible to say that the enemy will not succeed in one place or another in winning some decisive success."

Germans who have arrived in Holland within the last fortnight have shown extraordinary pessimism as to the situation. The kaiser is said to be traveling from one point to another, having conferences with his generals. Each of the generals refuses to allow his front to be shorn of men.

"I have seen letters from Germans written in code in order to escape censorship, saying the food situation despite dictators and mass feeding, grows worse every day, and that popular dissatisfaction is growing," writes a correspondent.

"The semi-official agency Korrespondens Norden says: 'Rainy weather makes probable a delay in ripening of the harvest and there is disquietude about the empire's grain supplies.'"

CASEMENT APPEALS FOR A NEW TRIAL

Sir Roger Seeks to Have Real Fate Determined Today—Tecnical Point Point In His Defense.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, July 17.—Six black-robed judges are sitting here today to hear Sir Roger Casement's appeal for a new trial. Should the judges rule that Sir Roger's conviction on the charge of giving aid and comfort to England's enemies by stirring up the Irish rebellion was just, the Irishman must hang. Sir Roger, one of the most brilliant men ever in the king's service, whose work among the colonies brought him a title and the royal favor, recently was found guilty of high treason. His defense was that he was working in the interest of Ireland's sovereignty, but not against England.

Although a statement has been communicated from the American government, through Ambassador Page, informing the British government that much interest is taken in the disposition of Sir Roger's case, nothing more nearly approaching a formal appeal for clemency could with diplomatic propriety be vouchsafed. The judges may not anounce their decision today.

STATE TROOPS READY FOR STAY ON BORDER

Message Received at Milwaukee That Wisconsin Troops May Receive Assignment to Border.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Milwaukee, July 17.—A special message received today from Fort Sam Houston, Tex., reported prospects of an early assignment to border duty of the Wisconsin brigade now in camp there. Reports of internal troubles in Mexico becoming worse, and of Villa becoming more violent in his depredations, were received at the camp, and officers of the brigade are preparing for an extended stay in the south.

The Wisconsin troops are just finishing the hardening training which was given them upon their arrival, preparing them for border duty.

It was reported today that Regimental Sergeant Major Edward Caldwell of Fort Atkinson will probably be appointed as second lieutenant to "C" company, Whitewater, succeeding George Bennett, whose resignation has been accepted.

NO NEED FOR FUNDS TO AUGMENT RATIONS

War Department Issues Order Prohibiting Army Officers from Soliciting Donations.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, July 17.—General orders were issued by the war department today prohibiting army officers from taking part in any movement for the solicitation of funds to augment rations issued by the government to national guardsmen in the federal service.

A movement said in a published report to be on foot, was declared by department officials to be unnecessary and ill-timed.

"The army rations furnished the troops," says today's order, "is ample for all purposes when properly used, and officers and enlisted men of the organized militia and national guard in the service of the United States are not to participate in obtaining funds for such a purpose."

RURAL CREDIT BILL SIGNED BY PRESIDENT

MEASURE CREATES 12 LAND LOAN BANKS UNDER DIRECTION OF FEDERAL BOARD.

MAY NAME MOHLENPAH

Clinton Banker, It is Understood, is Being Considered for Membership on Loan Board.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, July 17.—President Wilson today signed the rural credit bill passed recently by congress. Just before signing the measure, which creates a system of twelve land loan banks under direction of a federal board, the president made a short address, pointing out the benefit he believed would ensue under its operations.

"On occasion of this time," said the president, "there are so many things to say that one would despair of saying them briefly and adequately, but I cannot go through the simple ceremony of signing this bill without expressing feeling I have in signing it. It is a feeling of profound satisfaction not only, but of, real gratitude that we have completed this piece of legislation which I hope will be immensely beneficial to farmers of the country.

"The farmers, it seems to me, have occupied heretofore a singular position of disadvantage. They have not had the same freedom to get credit on their real estate that others have had who were in manufacturing and commercial enterprises, and while they have sustained our life, they did not in the same degree with some others, share in the benefits of that life.

"Therefore, this bill along with the very liberal provisions of the reserve act, puts them upon an equality with all others who have genuine assets, and makes the great credit of the country available to them. One cannot but feel that this is delayed justice to them, and cannot but feel that it is a very gratifying thing to play any part in doing this act of justice. I look forward to the benefits of this bill not with extravagant expectations but with confident expectations that it will be of very wide reaching benefit and incidentally it will be of advantafe to an investing community, for I can imagine no more satisfactory and solid investment than this system will afford to those who have money to use.

"I sign the bill, therefore, with real emotion, and am very glad to be faored by your presence and supported by your feelings. I have no doubt in what I have said regarding it."

In addition to the number of members of the house and senate, the signing was witnessed by David Lubin, one of the originators of the bill, and representatives of the National Grange, the Farmers' Education and Co-operative Union, the Farmers' Society of Equity, the Ancient Order of Gleaners, the Farmers' National Congress and the National Council of Formers' Co-operative Associations.

Secretary McAdoo conferred with the president later on the selection of the members of the new farmers' loan board, who will be appointed in the near future. Among those to be understood to be under consideration for membership on the board is H. A. Moehlenpah of Clinton, Wis.

DUEL IN FRANCE LOST DURING WAR

Indications Are That Famous Manner of Settling "Honors" Has Fallen Into Discard.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, July 17.—The duel is one of the ancient institutions of France that has fallen into neglect during the war. The last sensational encounter on the "field of honor"—a bloodless one—took place after the election of the chamber of deputies in 1914, not long before hostilities broke out. It was between Joseph Cailiaux, former minister of finance, and his unsuccessful opponent, Louis d'Aillieres. Caillaux fired into the air and d'Aillieres fired into the ground.

Since that meetting M. d'Aillieres has been greviously wounded on another "field of honor." Acting as an intermediary officer between the firing line and the command in the rear, he was hit by a fragment of a shell that claimed him, probably for life.

It is attributed to the fact that so many Frenchmen, like M. d'Aillieres, have shed their blood on the battlefield that the duel has been abandoned and there is a well-defined sentiment that it has come to an end for good and all.

Some credit the "sacred union" of parties and classes with this reform, while there are certain proofs that it is due to popular deprecation of personal conflicts between Frenchmen while "the Germans are still at Noyon." The "sacred union" has not prevented disputes and provocations.

Two men contesting for a favorable place from which to review troops on the Esplanade des Invalides came to blows and one of them tossed his card to the other.

"If you are so eager to fight," cried a bystander, "why don't you do as those boys did?" pointing to some armless and legless soldiers lined up before the troops to be decorated.

Two young men in a popular cafe exchanged sarcasms, followed by insults, blows and an exchange of cards. "To Verdun with them!" cried the spectators. "Put them out!"

The manager threw both of them into the street, where the idlers jeered them until in common defense they made up their quarrel and walked off together.

His stay in this country will continue until after the presidential election, which he proposes to study. His investigations take him into every walk of American life. He has met many of the most influential men of the country, in political, industrial and business spheres, besides sounding the farmer, laborer and ordinary citizens generally on their ideas and beliefs.

"I have found the peril of the hyphen to exist only among such people as the I. W. W.s and the anarchists," said Dr. Krishna today. "While foreign born citizens still have a friendly and warm interest in the land of their birth, they are at heart loyal American citizens."

The people of India admire grealy the advancement which the people of America have made in all lines of development and look to this country for aid and inspiration in the matter of Indian development, according to Dr. Krishna. To this end hundreds of young Indians are being sent to the American universities to study American methods and practices.

"While we in India welcome your religious missionaries," he said, "we also would welcome more of your commercial missionaries. You should send at least one commercial missionary for every religious missionary. There is a great field in India for all sorts of manufactured goods which I believe America will some day supply."

Friendship of people in the orinet for America was inspired largely by the return of the Chinese indemnity and by the policy toward the Philippine islands, according to Dr. Krishna. Owing to covetousness of England and Japan for the Philippines, he maintains that the islands are not yet ready for independence.

TRIES TO SWIM ACROSS RIVER; LOSES STRENGTH; RESCUED

William Burnsham, a Wells-Fargo express company driver from the Janesville office, had a narrow escape from drowning at Goose Island yesterday when he attempted to swim across the river. Burnsham had covered about half the distance when his strength gave out. Crying for help, he was soon reached by Darrel Sullivan, West Milwaukee street, who was swimming in the vicinity. Sullivan reached shore safely with Burnsham.

JOHN CUNNINGHAM HAS SLIGHT STROKE

Suffers Paralytic Attack Brought on By Excessive Heat.—Has Favorable Chance of Recovery.

John Cunningham, president of the Rock County Bar association and prominent Janesville attorney, is ill with a slight paralytic stroke at his home, 758 South Bluff street. While there was little change in his condition today, he was resting quietly and physicians held out hope for his recovery. The paralysis at present is confined to his left arm, and there is a chance that it will spread no further.

Excessive heat of the last few days is believed to have caused the attack. Mr. Cunningham complained of an indisposition Saturday evening when he came home for supper, and members of his family noted that he appeared somewhat dazed. He apparently recovered and insisted on returning down town to keep an appointment. T. E. Welsh brought him home later in the evening, and immediately after retiring his illness demanded the attention of a physician.

Advice—Often Worth Heeding

—particularly when that advice refers to habits that directly affect one's health and comfort.

Thousands, annoyed by headaches, nervousness, biliousness, sleeplessness, etc.—often due to coffee drinking—have heeded a friendly suggestion to quit the coffee and use

Instant Postum

This pure food-drink is made of wheat, roasted with a bit of wholesome molasses. It has a rich, snappy flavor much like that of high-grade Java coffee, yet it contains no caffeine—the drug in coffee—nor other harmful element.

Freedom from caffeine gives Nature right of way to rebuild and revitalize the mental and physical forces.

There are two forms of Postum: The original Postum Cereal must be boiled; Instant Postum, a soluble form, is made in the cup by adding boiling water—ready instantly. Some prefer one, some the other; they are equally delicious and the cost per cup is about the same.

With the most coffee-drinkers the change to Postum marks the start to better health and greater comfort.

"There's a Reason"

Grocers everywhere sell Postum.

CORN CROP SHOWS A DECIDED IMPROVEMENT

Past Two Weeks Has Seen This Important Asset to the Farm Shows Remarkable Gains.

Corn may yet be King of the Wisconsin crops this year despite the cold wet springs months that bid fair to ruin the average farmer who hoped for great things from his corn this season. The past two weeks of blistering sun has apparently killed the cut worms and grubs that were aiding the wet spring days in playing havoc with the stalks and corn has taken rapid strides, growing day by day.

The past ten days have seen a general let-up in the corn fields and a greater activity in the hay fields. A few days more of good hot dry weather and the teams will be seen going up and down the long rows once more. With the passing of time there is evident an increase in the size of the corn stalks, and at this writing there are many acres of corn knee high in the county. "Knee high" corn is the bringer of smiles if that be near the fourth of July, for it means, "a corn crop with half a chance." However, it calls for a little thinking on the part of the smiling one if he would have the best possible returns from his cultivation, as with many other things in any vocation, there is a right and a wrong way, one is a benefit while the other is a detriment.

One of the very common mistakes is to cultivate shallow when the corn is small and to lay it by with a deep cultivation. The reverse would be more profitable. There is little danger to the roots from the first deep cultivation, and there is a great advantage in going deep enough to secure a good mulch. After the corn plant has reached a height of 2 or 3 feet the cultivations should be no deeper than is necessary to keep the ground clean. This is usually about 2 or 3 inches deep. This depth will produce a much 2 to 4 inches in thickness which will be sufficient to retain all soil moisture.

Soil or dust is a condition that results from frequent stirring of the soil, the fineness of which tends to form a blanket and thus break the capillary attraction from the sub-soil. This prevents evaporation. Capilary attraction is a physical phenomena by which the moisture in the sub-soil is drawn to the surface. Taken up by the sun's rays evaporation soon takes place. It is this condition that we wish to avoid, and this is the reason for the so-called dust or soil mulch. It is a mistake to think that the longer the drought the more frequent the cultivation. After a fine mulch has been procured its frequent stirring is not necessary except in so far as is required to keep the weeds from starting. We are in drought at this time, and if your corn is clean, has a good dust blanket on top, don't worry, your corn plant is drawing its water from the subsoil, where it is best drawn from.

Many cultivate corn as though the roots went straight down instead of spreading out through the surface of the soil. It is here that we make a serious mistake. The plant is beginning to lay up its supply of food and if the roots extending out into the middle are broken off the plant ceases its storage of food to produce other roots. The growth of new roots is naturaly at the expense of the vitality and food supply. We are apt to feel that as this is our last chance at the corn we must give it a "good one," a deep cultivation, especially is this true if the weeds have gotten a start. This is a mistake. Plan to cultivate frequent and shallow. Leave the ground level. Let it be deep at first, but it must be shallow later on as the plant develops. An undisturbed root system and a dust mulch are the two essentials that we seek in any cultivation.

PHILIPP IN EFFORT TO SETTLE STRIKE

Governor Persuades Labor Leaders at Allis-Chalmers Plant to Delay Walk-Out For 24 Hours.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Milwaukee, July 17.—The impending strike of metal trade workers, which was expected to start this morning with a walk-out of more than 1,200 machinists and shop workers at the Allis-Chalmers Company works, which would effect approximately 5000 more metal workers in this city, has been delayed for at least twenty-four hours, it was learned today. The walk-out had been set for ten this morning, but through efforts of Governor E. L. Philipp the calling of the strike has been postponed until that hour Tuesday. The governor held long conferences at his home last night with labor leaders and proposed a postponment. His proposal was accepted in the hope that other conferences which Mr. Philipp will have today with employers and employees, representatives may result in finding of some common ground on which the matter may be adjusted and the strike averted.

Does It Run On Kerosene?

THE most important feature of a farm power engine today is the fuel it uses.

That, more than anything else, determines its usefulness and economy.

At present prices of gasoline and kerosene, you could not afford to accept a gasoline engine as a gift, if you had to use it.

You could better afford to pay a big premium for a Mogul kerosene engine.

FOODS THEY BUILD OR DESTROY

Amazing but rarely suspected truths about the things you eat.

By ALFRED W. McCANN (Copyright, 1916, by Alfred W. McCann.)

CHAPTER 35

There is much evidence to indicate that an excess of refined sugars in the diet is a direct cause of many diseases. Refined sugars, such as white cane sugar and glucose or corn syrup, do not conduct themselves in the body in a manner similar to the condcut of natural sugars such as honey. Notwithstanding this fact young America is encouraged to consume large quantities of penny candies and other denatured sweets daily.

This refinement, resulting in a constantly increasing abundauce of demineralized starches, sugars, and glucose, ends in many diseases among which it now appears diabetes is one of the most conspicuous.

"In younger patients," declares [illegible], "it is not safe to allow an amount of sugars and starches more than two-thirds of that tolerated, and they must be kept under close supervision because they are more likely to progres from a hild to a severe form of the disease, even under treatment, for the reason that they are apt to be careless and self-indulgent."

Warnings of this kind, uttered by specialists who have devoted years to the study of but one form of a disease that is rapidly increasing, are rarely heeded by the laity for the reason that fhe laity rarely hear them.

"The younger the patient the more marked are the evidences of excesses in carbohydrates," declares Friedenwold and Ruhrah, "yet we continue to encourage our children to daily indulgene in penny sweets (refined sugar and glucose), notwithstanding the abnormal proportion of refined carbohydrates which constitute the bulk of their breakfast, dinner and supper.

It requires no distortion of these statements to jusitify the conclusion that if excessive indulgence in sugars and starches diminishes tolerance and causes a mild case of diabetes to progress to a severe form of the disease, it is this very excess of sugars and starches which sets up diabetes in the first place by eventually destroying all tolerance for such denatured foods.

Olaf Hammarsten, emeritus professor of medical and physilogical chemistry in the University of Upsala, is very positive on this point." A hyperglycemia may be caused by the introduction of more sugar than the body can destroy. If too much sugar is introduced into the intestinal tract at any one time, so that the assimilation limit is over-reached, the glycemia is caused by the passage of more sugar into the blood than the liver and other organs con destroy."

The fact is recognized by the medical profession that over-taxing any organ sytematicaly is certain to be followed by a morbid condition in the functioning of that organ.

In the morbid condition described as diabetes the factor of most significance is always the carbohydrate factor. All the evidence warrants the assumption that this carbohydrate factor is not alone a symptom of the disease, but its actual cause.

Excess sugars in the diet are condemned as injurious by many authorities for no other reason than that many individuals are actually incapable of disposing of them without injury.

Robert Hutchinson, physician to the London Hospital, declares: "It must be borne in mind that the assimilation limit is not the same for all individuals. Some people are liable to convert more sugar into glycogen than others. Persons with a low assimilation limit are potential diabetics—that is to say, they are more liable, through sugar excesses, than others to become the victims of diabete's."

Here is indeed a direct connecting link between sugars and diabetes.

There is evidence to indicate that artificial sweets, such as white sugar and glucose, conduct themselves in the body in a manner not now understood by scientists, but with much less tolerance than is enjoyed by natural sugars, accompanied by the other food elements with which nature endows then in the raw or urnefined state.

Dr. Alonzo E. Taylor declares that all sugars are not tolerated in the same way in the body. "Levulose and lactorse are sometimes tolerated and utilized better by the diabetic than is glucose," he says.

He is not clear is to the meaning of this fact. He simply cites it as a fact. He calls attention to the phenomenon that all the starches yield only glucose, not fructose or galactose, and there are variations in the toleration of starches of different derivations.

"The starch of the potato," he declares, "is supposed to burn better than that of corn. There is no doubt of one fact. Diabetics tolerate oatmeal better than any other carbohydrate. It is common to feed a diabetic with little glycosuria and low acidosis, 100 grams of starch per day in the form of oatmeal (accompanied by its natural mineral salts), when 50 grams of glucose (hydrolized cornstarch) will pass almost quantitatively into the urine."

"For this fact, striking as it is, we have no explenation," he says.

Referring to the same phenomenon, Julius Friedenwold, professor of gastro-enterology in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Baltimore, and John Ruhrar, professor of diseases of children in the same institution, declare: "The different varieties of sugars and starches ingested may vary in their glycosuria-producing power. Glucose causes the greatest percentage of sugar to appear in the urine in the shortest time. Fruit sugar augments the glycosuria only to one-half the extent when given in the same amount."

Here the lessened tolerance for glucose, as compared with other sugars and carbohydrates, is clearly manifested. Who will say that this lessened tolerance for glucose is without significance? Uttered by such eminent authoritieis, these observations indicate the vastness of the unexplored field over which refined and demineralized foods have taken possession, yet we commonly read in the magazines advice to mothers written in positive and conclusive terms: "Give your children plenty of sugar, candy and sweets. It is good for them."

Occasionally a pioneer strikes out in the direction of the truth, only to be startled by the discovery that all natural foods conduct themselves in the body in a manner entirely dissimilar to the conduct of unnatural, artificial or prepared foods.

As reported in Rousski Vratch, June 27, 1915, and referred to in the New York Medical Journal, Oct. 9, 1915, A. Ia. Davidoff made the accidental observation that the ingestion of honey by diabetics does not seem to increase the amount of sugar in the urine.

He then permitted a number of diabetics to add honey to their diet and found that, far from increasing the glycosuria, the excretion of sugar diminished considerably in some cases.

The cónclusion reached by Davidoff is that honey is a very useful and certainly a very palatable article of food in diabetes.

Honey is not glucose. Glucose is not sap maple syrup or maple sugar. Glucose is not sorghum or open kettle cane syrup or old fashioned molasses, now a thing of the past.

Is it possible, in the presence of such evidence as is now at hand, that the people will continue to tolerate their national indifference to the most vital home issue now before them? We shall see.

FARM SEED BUSINESS KEEPS YOUTH HOME

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Austin, Texas, July 17.—"By developing the business of growing and selling select seeds in Wisconsin has kept hundreds of her young men upon the farms of the state."

When R. A. Moore, secretary of the Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment Association made that statement here today before the annual Texas Farmers' Institute he struck a responsive note. From his report of the grain breeding work done in the Badger state his audience was still further convinced that 'one of the best ways to keep our young men' on the farms is to give them an opportunity to think and have as good or better earning capacity on the farm as elsewhere in life."

In his audress the speaker reviewed the work of Wisconsin farmers, who by cooperation with the College of Agriculture and Experiment Station have rapidly and effectively increased the state's annual production of better corn, barley, oats, rye, and other small grains.

"Only 15 years ago," he said "Wisconsin was trying to grow a large number of varieties of corn, and about as many of barley, oats, rye and wheat. But few varieties noted for their quality and yield were being grown by or even known to our farmers.

"To correct these and other defects the College of Agriculture took up the work of breeding seed grains of high yield and quality.

"The result is that over two-thirds of all the oats grown in the state are of pedigreed varieties; over three-fourths of all the barley grown in Wisconsin came from the bred-for-production stock and the state now grows about one-eighth of all the barley produced in the United States; and four varieties of corn have been bred and disseminated which are now being largely sought by the farmers and seedsmen in that and other states.

"Through the work with young people in special courses at the College of Agriculture, and by means of the larger opportunities in farming that have come through the growing and selling of pure bred seeds, results have been accomplished far beyond the mere economic side of the question. We have helped solve the big problem of keeping boys on the farm."

MILITARY ATTACHE FROM U. S. REALIZES WHAT GERMAN GAS IS

American, Now at Paris, Still Lacks Voice Control as Result of Trench Experience.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, July 17.—Colonel Spencer Cosby, United States military attache at Paris, has been speaking in a hoarse whisper of late. His friends have noted it and have expressed their regrets at his very bad cold. Colonel Cosby's voice has not permitted him to reply, and he has let it go at that—a cold. But it was not a cold.

The use which the German army has made of poison gas in the present war has brought a new and terrible new element of destruction into military science. Just what this terrible new agency is, what part it plays in the offensive and defensive tactics, and to what extent if any it must be recokoned with as a permanent element in future warfare—these are problems which the military experts throughout the world are trying to determine. Here in France where the poison gas has been used with most deadly effect in Champagne, Argonne, and all along the fighting line, its ravage has been particularly apparent, and the military attaches of many countries have been active in securing data for their governments on this new agency.

Personal Investigation.

Colonel Cosby shared the keen interest of his brother military investigator and in one respect he went far beyond them. There was ample data, from the battlefields and the hospitals, where ghastly patients were living witness of the effects of the new element. But Colonel Cosby determined on a direct personal investigation on the element itself—the poison gas in all its forms—just as a medical scientist has at times put some new serums to the supreme test on himself.

"But you should be warned oft the extreme risk," said the Chief Chemist. "It is very dangerous—a matter of life and death."

Yet against the warning was the feeling that a mysterious agency of warfare needed to be explored to the very end. And so the word was given to go ahead and the official wheels turned swiftly in bringing together all sorts of gas, fresh and powerful, from the near-by fighting fronts.

The facilities for such a test of the gases were not easily obtained. But these were at last secured, and the American military attache was the first and only one to be granted these exceptional facilities. With these preliminaries arranged, Colonel Cosby found himself in the presence of long lines of bottles, ranged on shelves, much as in a chemist's shop. Surgeons and white-garbed attendants and chemical experts were about, with pestle and mortar, vacuum pumps and air-tight jars, making experiments and tests of gases and antidotes. Nearby hung a line of gas masks, with gaping eye-holes, used to counteract the poisonous fumes.

Three Kinds of Gases.

The large bottles contained the various forms of liquid gas, direct from the front, and in varying degrees of strength. Most of them showed a volatile yellowish liquid which on being exposed to the air gave off the deadly gases which have wrought such havoc. There were three distinct groups of these gases: first, those bursting into flame and commonly known as liquid flame; second, the tear-producing gases, which do not kill or permanently maim, but which so blind a column of onrushing troops that they become helpless and are brought to a halt; and, third, the actual poison gas which suffocates and kills with ten times the horror of a bullet or shell. This last, it is the belief of military experts, is a barbarism of warfare which must be ultimately banned by the universal sentiment of civilization. But they are equally of the belief that the lesser forms of gas—which do not kill but merely interrupt the forward progress of an attack—are a permanent element of defensive military strategy which must be taken into consideration in future warfare.

"This is the least deadly," explained the Chief Chemist, as he presented one of the bottles containing the inflammatory gas. He drew the glass stopper very cautiously, and Colonel Cosby took a slight whiff of the gas. It was not overpowering or violent in its effect—only a pungent odor of either. Now the second class of gasses were reached—the tear-producing gases—and these too were tested in the same way. These, also, were not overpowering but gave the same sharp odor of ether and a perceptible effect on the eyes. Colonel Cosby was beginning to think the gases were not so very bad after all.

They had now reached the poison gas—the deadly gas which clutches and kills. The chemist paused.

Try Anything Once.

"You will not try this," he said appealingly.

"Yes, all of them," said the Colonel positively, recalling the rather agreeable pungent odor of the other gases.

"Then we must be very cautious," said the chemist. "Place yourself about a foot away from the bottle. I will raise the glass stopper the slightest possible fraction of an inch, so that only an insignificant portion of gas can escape—but it will be enough. Now, ready!"

He drew the stopper the slightest particle, anly only for an instant, with Colonel Cosby a foot away. But in that instant the Colonel felt he had been hurled back twenty feet. Tongues of fire were eating at his throat, and ten thousand needles were darting around his neck. It seemed as though live vitriol had emptied in his mouth and was coursing through his veins. His whole vocal system was paralysed. The infinitesimal portion of the deadly gas had, in an instant, overpowered him.

Cosby Couldn't Talk.

It was some little time before Colonel Cosby was in a position to discuss his tests. The chief chemist said the effect would continue some hours and probably some days. It would be most observable, he said, in eating or drinking.

Colonel Cosby took an auto home, his throat on fire, but not otherwise physicallly affected. That night every mouthful of dinner had the unmistakable taste of the poison gas; each draught of water had the same taste of the deadly gas; and even the puffs of a cigar had the taste of so many puffs of this death-dealing gas—always the fiery needles and so many draughts of vitriol. Colonel Cosby could speak to his family only in inarticulate whispers. They were naturally much concerned over the possible after effects.

When Colonel Cosby saw a doctor next day, the throat was found to be in a very bad condition, as from an acute attack of laryngitis. The Colonel continued on his duties, but for a week he could speak only in whispers. It was ten days before the clutch of the poison gas on the throat had been relaxed enough to let him speak again in full voice.

"That's a bad case of laryngitis," said the Russian ambassador.

Pillows Generally Too High.

A family doctor writes: "I cannot give you a universal recipe for sound sleep, but let me tell you that in all the thousands of patients I have seen in bed I have never met with one who arranged his pillows hygienically. All too high, far too high. High pillows curve the spine, bend the neck, and thus prevent the free circulation of blood in the brain. You can never get the full value out of a night's sleep unless you fix your pillow so low that the head and neck are just on a level with the spine."

PEOPLE VS. PROGRESSIVES.

Really the September primaries have developed into a case of the People versus the Progressives. Tax-eaters, if you choose to call them by this title, but at any rate not the real friends of the average taxpayer, small property-owner and citizen, to say nothing of the "big business interests."

The alignment has not been drawn any too distinctly. One ticket headed by men placed in nomination by delegates from all parts of the state, with no cut and dried program, no pulling of wires and red tape and the other a ticket suggested by one master mind and carried into execution by his trusted followers.

Jeffris is fighting the people's battle and while his campaign is distinct from that of the Philipp campaign, still the two must preforce be associated together as both men stand for practically the same doctrines of republicanism and both are earnest in their adherence to the best interests of the taxpayer and the common people.

Jeffris has dared to call a spade a spade and consequently his enemies are having hard work to attempt to disprove his statements by reiterating senseless charges against his political doctrines. They can not deny self-evident truths but they can distort and misrepresent facts so that no one would know them for what they intended.

The same sort of a campaign has been waged against Philipp during the past two years. His work in seeking to reduce the general taxes of the state were sadly hampered by the legislature, acting under the instruction of the "Tax-eaters," and as a result much valuable legislation was thrown in the discard. However, enough was accomplished to demonstrate what can be done if Philipp is elected for a second term and given a legislature to back him up.

Taking it all in all, it is a campaign of the People versus the Progressives who represent the "Tax-eaters," while the people's champions are the "Tax-savers," and seek their endorsement at the September primaries not so far distant after all.

UP TO CITIZENS.

It is up to the citizens of Janesville to make the proposed Home Coming during the week the Janesville Fair is being held, a success or failure. The committee named to take the matter in charge are doing valiant services, but they must have the assistance of the citizens generally or even their individual efforts can accomplish but little. The committee invites the hearty co-operation in securing a list that will give the names of former residents so that letters of invitation may be sent them. It might also be suggested that residents of the city might play their individual part by sending out personal invitations of their own to old friends to come back and renew acquaintances and enjoy themselves.

Home Comings always bring back fond memories, recall tales long forgotten and pleasures that were enjoyed in days of yore. Of course many of the old-timers who return will miss familiar faces, but they will find a younger generation in their place ready to give them a warm and hearty welcome and aid in their enjoyment of the visit to scenes always to be remembered. Janesville has sent thousands of men and women out into the big world and many of them have accomplished wonders not expected of them. Of course the city is proud of them and will welcome them back with the others with open arms.

Think over the list of your old friends who might be interested to return for a few days' visit and hand their names to the secretary of the Commercial club that they may receive a formal invitation to come back to Janesville and enjoy themselves as they did long years ago. Janesville is a pretty good place to come back to. There are lots of warm-hearted people who live here whom it is a pleasure to meet, to know and renew acquaintances with. It is up to the citizens to make this Home Coming a success and they must all aid materially by helping the committee as far as possible.

ORPET NOT GUILTY.

Orpet is not guilty of the murder of his girl sweetheart. The jury of twelve men, after weeks of deliberation, hearing the testimony fo hundreds of witnesses, the exhaustive arguments of the learned attorneys on both sides, have so decided. In the eyes of the law the prisoner is freed of the awful charge, but the lesson driven home by this trial should sink deep into the heart and mind of every parent. The tale of the sordid love affair, the lack of parental discipline and the lack of confidence of the girl in her parents, and the boy in his teachings of right and wrong, are facts that sink deep.

You father and mother with growing boys and girls, make them your confidents. Make them your companions. Forget your bridge, forget your golf, forget your card clubs, your dancing, your auto trips, your fraternal societies, your church societies, your picture shows, if it interferes with making your boys and girls your companions, your confidents and makes them believe you are their best friend.

You men with sons growing up, know where they go of an evening, who they are with, and what they do. Be a companion to your boy and show him the pitfalls that perhaps you fell into. Show him the evils that beset the ways of young men and young women and treat him as your equal and companion—not as a mere plaything to be enjoyed at home. To the mother belongs the girl, but to the father belongs the boy to show him the ways of righteousness and truth and justice.

Orpet has been declared not guilty of the crime he was charged with. Be it by clever manipulations of the technicalities of the law or by the law of the great unseen Power, who judges us all, he is free. May his steps in the future trend in such a way that he will honor the parents who bore him and who have stood so nobly by him in this his time of peril and privation. But you fathers and mothers take home the lesson taught and remember that even a seventeen year old girl and a twenty-year old boy are fast approaching man and womanhood and need care and attention.

A NEBULOUS SOVEREIGNTY.

"Precisely what does President Wilson mean when he speaks of the sovereignty of Mexico, which he is trying to respect?" asks the Wall Street Journal. "Or, without disrespect, does Mr. Wilson ever mean anything precisely? He is a great coiner of phrases. But those phrases seem to lose their validity when they are subjected to the acid test of fact. What is Mexican sovereignty, and in whom does it vest? Not in the Mexican people, and certainly not in Carranza.

"What Mexican sovereignty is there other than this figment of the president's imagination? There is no government in Mexico in any real meaning. The Mexican people have no choice in their government in the sense that our democracy understands. It is not even sovereign over itself. Mr. Wilson has coined one more sounding phrase. Perhaps his mind was evolved, out of its inner consciousness, a mysterious entity, which he feels bound to respect. If this is so, his capacity for self-delusion has reached a point where it surpasses its own record.

"It was remarked by a New York editor, with a sincere appreciation of Mr. Wilson as a public speaker, that he enjoyed listening to the President's speeches but he never could remember afterwards what the president said. They are vaguely suggestive, they stimulate thought in the listener, they leave an impression of earnestness and high philanthropy. But they never got anywhere. On analytical examination what is not platitude is so nebulous that it defies definition.

"Mr. Wilson may be right when he says that he has a one-track mind, whatever that may mean. But his track has no terminal facilities. He is everlastingly going somewhere and never getting anywhere. It may be that the track is circular, and that the passengers on it continually return to where they started.

"It is a fatal defect of the command of an attractive literary style, unsupported by disciplined thought, that all driving power is lost the moment that mental method encounters a condition and not a theory. Mr. Wilson cannot frame a valid draft upon the bank of public intelligence, because he draws it in terms so vague and illusory, that no accurate thinker can endorse his paper."

Sanitation is one of the first essentials to good health and the condition of a portion of the river bank where sewage was left by the falling of the water is evidence enough that something should be done to prevent the spread of some contagious disease.

Continual hammering away at the west front in the great war of the world has evidently convinced the allies that they must do some hammering on their own account if anything definite is to be accomplished.

Increasing use of the women's rest room by visitors and citizens is proving the value of the experiment and will assure the permanent establishment of such a civic center in the years to come.

Evansville is ready to entertain the public with its fair—the Rock County fair—and from the advance notices it should prove a most interesting display of Rock county products.

SCOTS HAVE PRIVILEGES OF FRENCH CITIZENSHIP

Very few people know that Scotchmen born in Scotland and of Scottish descent can claim the rights and privileges of French citizens when in France. After Charles VII was crowned at Rheims in 1429 he in gratitude for the assistance of Scottish soldiers, conferred the right of French citizenship on all Scots for evermore. The Scots have, therefore, two nationalities, and Rheims is once more a prominent place.—The Scottish-American.

PAGE ADS PUT PEP IN SALE CAMPAIGNS

So Says E. C. Tebbetts, Advertising Director of B. F. Goodrich Company.

E. C. Tibbitts, advertising manager of The B. F. Goodrich Company, of this city, in an address today turned the searchlight upon newspaper advertising and proved that it rested upon a stable, secure and successful foundation for the widespread promulgation of the gospel of modern merchandizing.

"I don't care how many autos you own, or whether you're a movie bug, or a golf fiend, a book-worm, or whether the whole family is down sick, you read the newspapers. everyone of you. There's nothing in the realm of print that beats the newspaper-reading habit for hanging on to your curiosity. You must know who is being nominated for president, how many warships went down yesterday, what is happening in town, in other cities and in other countries—and you must know it today.

Right Kinds of Ads Also Read.

"And when you read the newspapers you must read the ads. You can't escape them—not when they are written so that they uncover a vital spot in your armor of supposed indifference. Any other kind of an ad doesn't count. You wouldn't read it if time hung on your hands.

"I believe an advertiser should not attempt to capture the full quota of newspaper readers by small space—unless forced to. Use quarter pages and half pages as much as you can. Then your message can't be missed.

"And every now and then run in a full page ad. It will put pep into almost any selling campaign. It towers head and shoulders above the other claimants for attention. It is impressive. It's the 'big voice' in modern merchandizing—the voice that is heard 'round the whole city and out across the highways and by-ways of a paper's trading territory. It's a 42 cm. cannon shot—and its deep boom signals a selling victory.

"Every quarter page or half page ad that follows a page has twice the chance to succeed and to interest and impress the great bulk of readers with the advertiser's message. Experience proves it.

Goodrich Page Ad Hits the Mark.

"The B. F. Goodrich Co., recently ran a page ad all over the country entitled 'Integrity—and the house behind the tire.' The effect of this page was electrical. Dealers everywhere pasted the page in their windows. Newspaper readers were deeply impressed with the bigness, reliability and good faith of the wonderful Goodrich organization.

"The cost of this page in no sense represented the great dollars and cents good-will value which the Goodrich Company secured as a result. It was a money-maker, was that page ad. And it has vastly helped its smaller brothers, the quarter and half pages which followed, to sell Goodrich tires. It put thousands upon thousands of dollars worth of life into the whole campaign above what it cost. It has proved itself a wonderful investment."

Heat Cases: Two heat prostrations came to the attention of police department Saturday. One was that of a tramp, and the other a Whitewater creamery agent, who fainted in a chair at the Spaulding barber shop, on Academy street. Both were apparently recovered Saturday evening.

ELECTING A PRESIDENT

GRANT.

War Hero Elected President In 1868.

LINCOLN, having been assassinated, was succeeded in office by Andrew Johnson, who was vice president. The war had ended. Grant had returned a hero. The Republicans nominated the general, while the Democrats put forward Horatio Seymour of New York. The south, having been defeated, again participated in this election and supported Seymour.

The election of 1872 was an exciting one. Horace Greeley, formerly a Republican, had disagreed with his party and ran on the Democratic ticket and the Liberal Republican ticket. Grant was again the Republican nominee. There were four other minor candidates. Grant received 3,597,070 votes and Greeley 2,834,079.

FIND DYNAMITE UNDER FORD DAM

Big Box of High Explosive Is Discovered By Electric Company Workmen Last Week.

A big box of dynamite was found planted beneath a section of the Janesville Electric company's dam at Indian Ford last week. It had lain there for eight years. Although it would not be possible to explode the dynamite now, at the time it was placed there it was for no good purpose.

With the finding of the explosive farmers living along the shore of Lake Koshkonong and in the vicinity of Indian Ford instantly recalled the feud in that section about eight years ago. Arrayed on one side were farmers with property fronting on the lake shore, all interested in a reclamation project through the lowering of the level of the lake. Against them was the late Captain Pliny Norcross. Captain Norcross owned the dam at the Ford at that time and conducted a mill here. Unable to reach an agreement as to the sale of the dam the farmers took the matter into the courts and finally resorted to violence to gain their point. A section of the dam was dynamited with a big loss to Mr. Norcross.

Workmen engaged in work there last week uncovered a box filled with dynamite. It is figured that this constituted a portion of the charge planted to destroy the dam which did not explode.

Captain Norcross, a short time after the wrecking of a portion of the dam, disposed of his riparian rights to the Janesville Electric company.

During last spring a similar agitation to lower the level of the lake was being projected by the Koshkonong farmers. At that time Mr. Korst said the electric company was ready at any time to consider a price offered by the farmers. Hundreds of acres of rich fertile land will be available to agricultural purposes if the lake waters are lowered through tearing out of the dam at Indian Ford.

Mrs. Blanchard temporarily confiscated Losey's belongings and he started suit for their recovery and damages.

Tentative.

Their teacher had lately become engaged, and all the girls were tremendously interested — naturally. Everybody wanted to see the ring, and more than one was grievously disappointed in the size and splendor of the token. One ten-year-old maiden considered it critically and then remarked: "It's mighty small, ain't it? Does that mean that you haven't really quite made up your mind to take him?"

GRIMM KNOCKS OUT BELOIT FIST KING

Circuit Court Thought Fighter's Opponent Should Have Been Selected With Degree of Fairness.

Bert C. Canty, a Beloit prize-fighter, known in Line City pugilistic circles as "Bud Corbett," got a knockout blow in circuit court this afternoon. Judge Grimm delivered the punch when he granted Florence, his wife, a divorce on cruelty charges. "Bud," it seems, picked too small an opponent on several occasions since the time when he signed up for the life match, and Judge Grimm, knowing something about Wisconsin boxing commission rules, as well as Badger state divorce statutes, put one over on "Bud." She gets the custody of a minor child.

Glenn G. Magee, seeking to secure separation from Lottie M. Magee, on cruelty charges, will have to await the decision of Judge Grimm. The court took the case under advisement after testimony had been taken. No answer or defense was made by the defendant.

Florence M. Commons was granted a divorce from Thomas J. Commons on habitual drunkenness charges. Ethel A. Hathaway also secured a separation from her husband, Walter J. Hathaway. She charged failure of support.

PIONEER MILWAUKEE ROAD OFFICIAL DIES

Don J. Whittemore, Aged 86 Years, Builder of Puget Sound Extension, Expires in Milwaukee.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Milwaukee, July 17.—Don J. Whittemore, 86 years old, a pioneer resident of Milwaukee and for the last sixty years connected with the Milwaukee road as engineer, chief engineer, and finally as consulting engineer, died at his residence, 222 Biddle street, at 6 o'clock Sunday night. He had been confined to his home for the last two years because of illness.

One of the foremost civil engineers in the United States, Mr. Whittemore was recognized many times by his profession. He was elected president of the American Society of Civil Engineers in 1884. His papers on scientific subjects have attracted wide attention. He won international fame as an expert on bridge and tunnel construction.

Leaves Wife and Daughter.

Mr. Whittemore is survived by his widow and one daughter, Mrs. Philip Littell, now in the White mountains and residing at East Orange, N. Y. Mr. Littell was formerly editor of The Sentinel under Horace Rublee, and at present is one of the editors of the New Republic, in New York.

Entered Profession Early.

Mr. Whittemore was born at Milton, Vt., on Dec. 6, 1830. Early in life he exhibited a decided interest in applied science, mechanics and mathematics. Following a short course at Bakersfield academy, he became a member of an engineering corps engaged in making surveys for the projected Vermont and Canada railroad in 1847. In 1849 he was appointed assistant engineer.

When that work was completed he became assistant engineer of the Great Western railroad of Canada. His father was a contractor, and while engaged in building the Ohio Central railroad he called his son to that state to examine part of the work. While on this visit both Mr. Whittemore and his father were swept off a masonry abutment by a passing steamboat, his father being killed and he severely injured.

Extended Great System.

Mr. Whittemore accepted the position of assistant engineer of the La Crosse and Milwaukee line in 1857. Then he became engineer of the Southern Minnesota, holding this until 1860. He was made chief of the Milwaukee road's engineering corps in 1867.

While with the Milwaukee road he had charge of the construction of many miles of the railway, as well as of the great bridges across the Missouri and the Mississippi rivers. He evolved the plan of extending the road to the Puget sound, and was in full charge of the construction. This he considered his masterpiece.

Resigned In 1911.

After forty-seven years as chief engineer of the Milwaukee road, Mr. Whittemore resigned on Dec. 4, 1911. In recognition of his ability and unusual length of service, the company created the honorary office of consulting engineer, which duties he took up since 1912.

It was Mr. Whittemore who first determined the real value of the cement rock which lies on the Milwaukee river a short distance north of the city limits. He conducted experiments with the rock while employed by the Milwaukee road, and became engineering head of the Milwaukee Cement company. The degree of LL. D. was conferred upon him in recognition of his accomplishments.

Train the Cuticle.

If the hands are not good and the nails badly shaped try to improve the latter by training the cuticle. Every night soak the fingers in hot water for five minutes. Then with an orangewood stick press back the cuticle to lengthen the nails. Afterward rub in cold cream. Do not omit this of the soaking will make the cuticle very dry.

Nuevo Leon, the Smallest Mexican State

Washington, D. C., July 14.—Nuevo Leon, the smallest and most densely populated of the Mexican border states, is the subject of today's war geography bulletin issued by the National Geographic Society in Washington.

"Of all the frontier states to be patrolled by our national guard Nuevo Leon will present the least difficulties from a strictly 'border' point of view," says the bulletin, "for less than twenty miles of this political division of extremely irregular outline touches the Rio Grande. It is almost completely enclosed by the adjoining border states of Tamaulipas and Coahuila. For a distance of 125 miles, however, it is separted from the border only by a narrow strip of Tamaulipas, varying in width from ten to thirty miles.

"Nuevo Leon is only about one-fourth as large as the state of Chihuahua, but it has nine-tenths as many people. Compared with American commonwealths, it is about half as large as Mississippi, with a population equal to that of Utah.

"The northern and northeastern section of Nuevo Leon, the portion of the state with which the American border patrol will become familiar, gives an unfavorable impression, for the land is hot, dry and low. Further south, however, the Sierra Madre range, extending through the state for 150 miles at an average elevation of more than 5,000 feet, changes the character of the climate, making it so temperate and equable that some of the towns are popular health resorts for invalids from the United States.

"There are twelve rivers in the state, none of which is navigable. The Salado, in the northern section, is famous for its fish and fine pearl oysters.

"The valleys on the eastern slopes of the mountains are extremely fertile, producing many cereals and large crops of sugar cane, together with fruits and vegetables raised for the early spring market in American cities. Cattle raising is one of the chief industries of the state, large herds of sheep, goats and beef cattle finding excellent pasturage on the plateau. Like most of the Mexican states, the wealth of Nuevo Leon is largely in its mines, the principal mineral products being lead, zinc and silver.

"The state is well supplied with railroads, two of the big trunk lines of the republic furnishing communication with Laredo, Eagle Pass, Mexico City, Tampico and Torreon. The northern border lies 125 miles in an airline below San Antonio, Texas, and the southern tip of the state is crossed by the Tropic of Cancer.

"Nuevo Leon is one of the few states of Mexico in which no remains of the Aztecs or earlier races of prehistoric times have been found.

"The capital and chief city of the state is Monterey, which has won the sobriquet, the Chicago of Mexico, on account of its commercial activity and industrial importance."

Americanization of the Immigrant Is An Increasingly Important Problem

(By Frederic Ernest Farrangton, Bureau of Education.)

(The Interior Department, through its Bureau of Education, has undertaken a significant piece of work in forwarding the movement for Americanization. Dr. Farrington's article forms the first complete statement of this new activity.)

In April, 1914, the first step was taken which resulted in making the Division of Immigrant Education an organic part of the Bureau of Education of the Department of the Interior at Washington. Thoughtful people with large civic interests had been aroused by the revelations of the census report of 1910 to a realization of the significance of the alien problem in this country. For many a decade Americans with smug complacency had prided themselves on the irresistible power of American civilization to assimilate the foreigner who landed upon our shores. Nobody knew just how it was being done, nor could one point to any specific organization responsible for effecting the change, but somehow or other that subtle force of American civilization was ever busy at its task, and the alien was quietly but surely being transformed into an American.

With the publication of the immigration returns for 1905, which showed over one million immigrants entering this country that year, people began to wonder if after all the process of assimilation was really working as smoothly as it had been claimed. Million-immigrant years followed; the report of the immigration commission furnished a veritable mine of information, and the census report of 1910 finally portrayed the condition of that date. America suddenly learned that there were over thirteen million foreign born persons in the country, that over six and one-half million were males who might become citizens of the land, and that only three million of them had become citizens. Had the melting pot ceased to boil? Had the solution become saturated? What had become of the much vaunted ability of this country automatically to assimilate the foreign element?

Other figures from this same census report were still more disquieting. There were nearly three million persons in this country unable to speak and understand English, and of these, over two and a half million were over twenty-one years of age; in other words, beyond the age when they were likely to learn a new language without some external stimulant. No state has any law affecting the literacy or non-English speaking ability of the adult, and with few exceptions there are no compulsory laws on these points for minors who are above the compulsory school-attendance age.

Here, then, is the problem before the Division of Immigrant Education—to promote educational facilities for the illiterate or non-English speaking foreigner beyond the reach of compulsory attendance laws and to stimulate his attendance upon English and civics classes.

The first work of this division was to enter upon a general investigation of the existing facilities for the education of immigrants. With this information in hand, it is possible to plan an intelligent campaign for increasing the attendance upon schools already established, and for encouraging the establishment of new schools where need for them is disclosed.

One of the functions of the work is to bring local and state school authorities to a realization of the immigrant problem in their midst. School superintendents have shown by their replies to this office that they are not fully in touch with their own local conditions; and one state superintendent has written asking where statistics relating to the alien education problem in his own state may be obtained. Thus is this division carrying out one of the large functions of the bureau of education—to act as a clearing house for information.

Perhaps the most striking activity of the division has been in connection with the "America First" poster. This is a colored lithographed sheet showing a picture of Uncle Sam shaking hands with a foreign workman. It is prined in seven different foreign languages, and is designed to urge upon the foreigner the advisability of going to evening school and learning English. Over 100,000 of these posters have been distributed during the winter, and today they may be found in postoffices, shops, factories, schools, railroad stations, and on bulletin boards of civic associations, chambers of commerce and the like, from one end of the country to the other.

This poster did much for paving the way for building up friendly relations with commercial and industrial organizations. The United States Chamber of Commerce has its committees on Americanization and Education. The National Safety Council has its Conference Committee on Safety Education to co-operate with the Bureau of Education. Local business organizations are becoming aroused all over the country, and are anxious to have a share in this important educational and Americanization work.

The division has prepared comprehensive lists of texts in English for foreigners with separate groupings for the more important languages. The combined list includes specific titles reaching sixteen different foreign peoples. A Croatian or a Pole writes to this office—not infrequently in his native language—asking for a text which he can use in learning English. The division is in position to handle his letter and to furnish the information desired.

A plan of co-operation has been worked out in conjunction with the Bureau of Immigration whereby the names of children between four and sixteen years of age will be sent by the federal authorities at the port of entry to the educational authorities of the localities where the immigrant family proposes to settle. In this way the machinery is started to head off illiteracy and inability to speak English among the children of the alien. All now depends upon the watchfulness with which the local authorities follow up the information put at their disposal.

Circular letters have been sent out to school authorities suggesting ways and means of organizing evening school classes. "How to Organize Citizenship Classes for Immigrants," "Suggestions to Principals and Teachers of English for Foreigners," "New York State and the Americanization Problem," are some of the more important of these.

A civic syllabus for use in evening school classes for foreigners has been in preparation for some months. It will shortly be published.

In accordance with a suggestion from Secretary Redfield of the Department of Commerce, transmitted through the regular official channels, a "Handbook for Citizens," is now being prepared in this division which will give a brief, concise description of the various branches, departments and sub-divisions of the government and the relationship existing between the federal and state governments, and between this country and foreign countries. While such a compilation will be of immense value to the foreigner to whom our civil and political organization seems a hopeless maze, it is equally intended for the use of the ordinary American citizen whose knowledge on some of these points is not always perfectly clear.

Every opportunity has been embraced to promote educational facilities. As a part of the co-operative plan of the Bureau of Education for promoting education in the state of Delaware, this division followed out a fixed program in promoting the establishment of evening school facilities for adult aliens in Wilmington. Through its efforts, a local co-operating committee was formed, local interest was aroused, and a publicity plan formulated and carried to successful completion. Evening schools were opened on January 3, 1916. These schools are being financed by council had refused to appropriate $1,000 requested in order to carry on the work. Adult immigrants in Wilmington are now enjoying opportunities for learning English where before such opportunities were denied them. Courses suggested by this division are being followed by these classes.

In November, 1915, a petition signed by sixty-five Lithuanians of Melrose Park, Illinois, was addressed to the bureau praying for the establishment of an evening school wherein they might learn English. This was officially brought to the attention of the school authorities in Melrose Park, and in December they agreed to provide the school.

The division is also co-operating with the Pennsylvania State Department of Education in establishing divisions of vocational guidance under various city bureaus of compulsory attendance and by assisting in the formulation of policies, rules and regulations applicable to such divisions. By special request the chief of the division participated in working out a method of co-operation between the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry and the United States Bureau of Immigration for the joint maintenance of a state system of labor exchanges. By special arrangement also the chief of the division acts in a consulting capacity to the Pennsylvania commissioner of labor and industry and supervises the work of the division of immigration in the Pennsylvania bureau of employment.

One point should stand out clearly from the foregoing—that the division has not so much attempted to work alone as it has to enlist the co-operation of individuals, public authorities, organizations and industrial corporations who are or ought to be interested in the work in hand. This procedure was adopted by reason of a firm belief in co-operative effort and in the fundamental proposition that that individual, social or government organization will be most successful which early appreciates the validity of this principle and applies it in its activities.

SCOUTS ARE HAVING FINE TIME AT CAMP

Letter From Scout Camp Reports That All Are Having Fine Time at Camp.

Janesville's Boy Scouts are still enjoying their outing at Lake Koshkonong scout camp. Yesterday was a busy day at the camp as many of the boys' parents and friends were guests of the scouts. Following is a letter received from the chief scout correspondent:

To the Editor of the Gazette:

The Boy Scouts are still alive and all of us are feeling fine. We are having a peach of a time in spite of the mosquitoes, which bother us a little at night. Messes of fish have been caught for the last three days by the Scouts. Swimming is a part of every day's program. Tent inspection takes place right after dinner and every Scout must have his tent cleaned up and his bed made before that time. We have marshmallow roasts, pop-corn and peanuts to eat by the camp fire at night. Thursday a ball team (?) from Milton came over and we had a game. The score was 14 to 12 in favor of the Scouts.

There are lots of visitors to the camp. Yesterday and today most of us went swimming and fishing. Scouts Hanawold and Kakuske went on the fourteen mile hike today and all of the Scouts are trying to raise their averages. H. J. Center and two Scouts are coming up tonight. I'm getting tired of writing so I guess I'll stop.

Yours truly,
Chief Camp Correspondent.

DRY FORCES GATHER FOR BIG CONVENTION

Delegates Arrive at St. Paul to Attend Preliminary Conferences of Prohibition Party.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

St. Paul, July 17.—Most of the 1,254 delegates to the prohibition national convention which opens here Wednesday, were expected to arrive today in order to attend the "get together" conference tomorrow, when the union of all the forces opposed to the liquor traffic, will be discussed by nationally known reformers.

The convention proper will be called to order at the Auditorium Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock. Sessions will be held Wednesday afternoon and Thursday and Friday forenoons, the selection of presidential and vice presidential candidates coming on the final day.

Public mass meetings will be held at the auditorium Wednesday and Thursday evening. Thursday afternoon the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association will conduct an oratorical contest. Friday has been designated "Candidate Night," when the 1916 nominees will be introduced to convention delegates and visitors.

Preceding assembling each day of the convention, the Women's National Prohibition Federation, will hold conferences to complete its permanent organization and inaugurate campaign plans.

FIVE RECIPES FOR THE CANADIAN SOLDIERS

By Geo. C. MacLean.

Here are five recipes that I want to give to the Canadian soldiers. I hope every newspaper in the land will copy them:

1.—How to waterproof their overcoats.—Put 1 lb. of alum, 3 ozs. of fish glue (or any other first class glue) in five quarts of boiling water. When dissolved, add five quarts of cold water. When cold put in the overcoat for a few minutes. When dry it will shed the rain.

2.—A sure cure for dysentery.—Put a heaping tablespoonful of best laundry starch in half a pint of milk. Then put in two tablespoonfuls of blackberry brandy; if that is not handy put in enough red pepper to warm it up. Take this mixture every two or three hours.

3.—A cure for vomiting.—Put a heaping tablespoonful of English black currant jam into a glass of cold water, mash well, and take a swallow every few minutes.

4.—Best way to make an egg nog.—Put yolk of egg into a tumbler with a teaspoonful of Jamaica rum. Beat up well and put in a teaspoonful of sugar. Then put in half a pint of milk. Never put in white of egg.

5.—Cure for pneumonia.—Saturate a ball of cotton (one inch in diameter) with spirits of grain alcohol. Add three drops of chloroform to each ball of cotton. Place between the patient's teeth (after first using vaseline on the gums to prevent burning) and let the patient inhale the fumes in long, deep breaths for fifteen minutes. Then repeat for fifteen minutes more. Inhale again, and repeat the above about twenty times. The result will be that the lungs will relax and expand to their normal condition; in twenty-four hours the sufferer is out of danger, and in forty-eight hours cured, although weak. Change the cotton balls every seven minutes.

The Schroedter Quintet, the Big Third Day Attraction of the Chautauqua

NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND by DAISY DEAN

Vivian Rich.

Vivian Rich is the latest star who will try to get herself past the censors as an artist's model posing nude. It was not, according to studio gossip, until she had been offered and had accepted the role of Laura Sears in the forthcoming "Enchantment" that the startled Miss Rich learned she would be called upon in several scenes to rely solely upon rice powder and the purity of the classic pose, rather than upon the more substantial materials.

The discovery is reported to have pained her and she protested.

"I can't accept such a role," said the pained Miss Rich. "I simply can't and I won't."

Carl M. LeViness, her director, was not, however, so easily discouraged. He protested and pleaded and finally, according to the story, persuaded her to give the matter a night's consideration.

TAKES TO THE NUDE IDEA, AFTER ALL.

The next day, it is understood, Miss Rich was not so pained. She was inclined to think it might be the opportunity of a lifetime, but was still dubious about how the scenes would be taken. The director was a man, the photographer was a man and there were men actors, extras, carpenters and helpers all around the studio.

But this was quickly remedied and work started on the picture that morning. An expert camerawoman was found and the scenes were all photographed in a heavily curtained set. So many precautions were taken to prevent any male prowler from getting into the place that it is announced there was not a man within a mile of the studio at the time.

Ruth Stonehouse, who is being featured in a production of "The Spring Song," cannot forget her feeling of relief at the contrast between the public in Chicago and Los Angeles. It is not that she likes those in "Chi" the less, but that on the Pacific Rialto he public has become so used to seeing the film stars that she can walk down the Los Angeles Broadway without being embarrassed by the curious stares of those who have seen her on the screen. In Chicago, she says she hardly dared venture on Michigan boulevard.

Myrtle Stedman is suffering from her eyes, which were burned during the taking of some interior scenes in "The American Beauty," in which artificial lights were used. At one time Miss Stedman's friends were afraid she would have to go to Philadelphia and undergo an operation, but it is now hoped that such a step may not be necessary. Miss Stedman has been almost inundated with sympathetic inquiries.

Monroe Salisbury is acting a very different sort of character in "The Eyes of the World" from that in which he appeared in "Ramona." He takes the part of a loose-jointed, cynical, withal kind hearted man of letters, and his make-up and the way his very figure is altered is extraordinary.

SEVEN CITIES HAVE NEW REGULATIONS AS TO THE MOVIES

Thirteen Cities Charge License Fees. —Censoring By Mayor or Chief of Police.

Seven of the sixteen largest cities in Wisconsin have developed methods of regulating moving picture shows and censoring objectionable films, according to statistics recently compiled by the University of Wisconsin extension division. Two cities have special committees appointed for the purpose. Thirteen cities have annual license fees for motion picture theatres.

In most of the cities the censoring of films is in the hands of the mayor or chief of police, or of some police official whose special duty it is to see that no objectionable films are shown. The yearly fee or license to conduct such theatres differs in various Badger cities. Several charge no license fee and others base the fee on seating capacity of the house. The licenses charged in some of the larger cities of the state and the means used to regulate moving picture theatres are as follows:

Ashland—$50; no regulation.

Beloit—$25; the chief of police passes on films considered objectionable.

Fond du Lac—$50; chief of police has authority to suppress objectionable pictures.

Green Bay—$25 to $50; no regulation.

Janesville—$10; no regulation.

Kenosha—No fee; no regulation.

La Crosse—$25 for house seating less than 500; $50 for larger houses; board of theatre inspectors has power to revoke license if hall is not safe or sanitary or if pictures are objectionable.

Madison—$50 for houses seating less than 500; 20 cents per seat for larger houses; mayor and chief of police have authority to suppress objectionable pictures.

Manitowoc—$30; license may be suspended by mayor when necessary for preservation of public decorum or public peace.

Marinette—$25 for moving pictures; $50 for moving pictures combined with vaudeville; no regulation.

Milwaukee—$30; board of censorship of three members appointed by mayor for two years with secreary at salary of $1,500 per year; every picture must be censored except those given purely for educational, charitable or religious association, fraternal society, library, museum, public or private school.

Oshkosh—$100 for houses seating more than 500; 20 cents a seat for smaller houses; certain regulations to assure safety of hall must be conformed with before license is issued.

Racine—No answer to inquiry.

Sheboygan—No fee; no regulation.

Superior—$50 if admission of 20 cents or more is charged; $75 for others; police woman has supervision.

Wausau—$25; no regulation.

AT THE APOLLO.

Blanche Sweet on Wednesday.

In her recent productions Blanche Sweet has been seen in many unusual characters; in "Ragamuffin" she was a child of the slums; in "The Black List" she was a daughter of an anarchist; in "The Sowers" she was a member of a Royal Russian household, and in "The Thousand Dollar Husband," at the Apollo on Wednesday, she is seen in the most startling of her many roles, that of a Swedish maid of all work in a college boarding house.

She is madly in love with one of the students, and when her wealthy uncle leaves her his fortune with the provision that she must marry immediately, knowing that the object of her infatuation is on the verge of ruin, she purchases him as a bridegroom.

She fals into the toils of a clever fortune teller and is just about to be robbed of her entire inheritance when the husband interferes. How the loveless marriage ripens and develops and the couple are reunited in complete happiness, tends to make a thrilling and unusual photodrama.

AT THE APOLLO.

Peggy Hyland, Noted English Favorite, Makes American Photoplay Debut in "Saints and Sinners"

Miss Peggy Hyland, the beautiful and talented little English actress, whose recent arrival in America to appear exclusively on the screen under the management of the Famous Players Film company, has created considerable newspaper comment, makes her debut to the American public in a thrilling picturization of Henry Johnson's noted dramatic success, "Saints and Sinners." This current release on the Paramount program will be shown at the Apollo tonight.

It is a matter of odd interest that Miss Hyland, who has distinguished herself abroad in the stellar roles of many stage successes, should appear in her first American screen offering in an Englishman's play, and a drama moreover, that won its first success in Europe, repeating its stage triumph later in the United States.

AT THE APOLLO.

Charlie Chaplin in "The Fireman."

"The Fireman" at the Apollo tomorrow shows Charlie Chaplin at his best. This is the second Mutual-Chaplin release, is diverting all the time, and in several instances its fun is decided enough to justify it being termed an uproarious two-reel comedy. In The Fireman the comedian, whose distinctive acting has won him such amazing popularity, brings to bear all the funny mannerisms and tricks for which he is noted. He includes a little of the "serious" acting he does so well and which never fails to have an effect of pointing the comic business immediately following.

AT THE BEVERLY.

Tonight.

The Beverly presents tonights a stupendous production in five acts, featuring Miss Florence La Badie in "Master Shakespeare, Strolling Player." This gorgeous production is said to be one of the finest ever produced by the Mutual Masterpictures and contains a beautiful love story with rich settings. The usual high class single reel comedy will also be shown tonight.

AT THE BEVERLY.

Tuesday.

Maude Gilbert, co-star of "The Fool's Revenge," in 6 acts, a William Fox production, which will be shown at The Beverly Tuesday lay thinly clad in the snow for over thirty minutes during the making of certain scenes of that picture. Miss Gilbert, as the wife of Anson, a clown, is murdered by her husband, who is convinced of her infidelity. She is choked to death and then thrown over a cliff

The scene was made on the heights of the New Jersey Palisades. In order to carry out the action of the piece it was necessary to show Miss Gilbert lying at the bottom of the Palisades. Four inches of snow and ice covered the selected spot, but Miss Gilbert ignored this fact and threw herself on the cold ground. During the time it took to make the scene she was given hot coffee four times and afterward rubbed vigorously by a maid.

As an extra added attraction Tuesday The Beverly will offer The Hearst Chicago Examiner cartoons which have been so well enjoyed by Beverly patrons. This reel also includes up-to-the-minute scenes of Uncle Sam's Boys in Mexico.

ROY K. MOULTON

The June Event.

Now comes with robins on the wing
The dainty blushing bride of spring.
A beauteous thing in filmy lace,
With pride writ on her haughty face.
The pretty bridesmaids all are there;
A galaxy that's passing fair.
The father's there upon display,
To give the blushing bride away.
The minister is at his post,
The one man who is needed most.
The best man is there with the rest,
In his boiled shirt and low-necked vest.
But there is one who's hard to find,
There are so few have him in mind.
He sort of gets lost in the crowd;
His mortal spirit is not proud.
He's elbowed 'round from place to place,
A selling plater in the race,
And not a person seems to care
A continental if he's there.
The humblest mortal in the room.
You guess correctly—he's the groom.

Uncle Abner.

When a feller's wife picks out his clothes there ain't much doubt as to who wears the lower portion of 'em around the house.

Hank Spink says horseshoes ain't a sign of good luck. He's been pitching 'em for nine years and ain't won a game yet.

If a feller has got any doubts whether his gal loves him and is thinkin' of him seriously, they disappear when she begins to criticise his neckties and pick ravelin's off'n his coat.

The kind of gal to marry is the one that can look as neat at 10 o'clock in the morning as she does at 10 o'clock in the evening. N. B.—There's isn't any.

Hank Tumms hunted for his razor strap six weeks before he discovered that his wife was using it for a belt. Some women are so ingenious.

There may somewhere in deep dark obscurity be a self-made man who ain't proud of the job, but if there is, he has kept himself carefully concealed from the public gaze.

Some men are born foolish and others raise pompadours.

There may be some difference between exercise and hard work, but it never has been discovered.

It is more blessed to give than to receive, especialy if it is a sour tip on a hoss race.

One of the mysteres of this world is why a statesman always has to scowl when he has his photograph taken.

A Couple of Ideas.

The next great emancipator to arrive will be the fellow who can invent a cuff button that can be put n the cuff with one hand inside of ten minutes, believes the Osborne (Kan.) Farmer. The average man isn't smart enough to put his cuff buttons in a shirt before he puts it on, especially when he is in a hurry.

Oakley, Kan., has a housewife, according to the Graphic, who, when she wants to kill a chicken, disdains to chop off its head or wring its neck. Instead, she shoots it in the head with a rifle, and has never missed one yet. The Graphic, however, suppresses the name of the hero who holds the chicken while she shoots. More modesty.

Melodrama.

She struggled vainly to arrest
The villain's vengeful hand;
He dragged her 'round and 'round the stage;
And cussed to beat the band.
Said he: Your lover is a chump,
Your brother is a thief,
Your father stole your ma to grief."
"Unhand me, villain," then she cried,
Or you will rue this day.
"I'll scream for help," she did it, too,
But no help came that way.
"You love muh," cried the villain, as
He grabbed her by the hair.
"'Tis false," she cried, in anguish wild,
And wilted o'er her chair;
"Tis false," she screamed, "tis false," again,
"As false as false can be!"
He found three switches in his hands;
"It surely is," said he.

Oddsen Ends, the riddle fiend, wound his long legs about the scaffolding and climbed two hundred feet up in the air to where Dennis Mince sat on a swinging girder of the great half constructed Sweezeway bridge.

"Did you," said Oddsen Ends, "ever see a sausage roll, or a biscuit box, or a table spoon, or a bicycle pump, or——"

"Watch your step," warned Dennis Mince, as his eight pound hammer came down on Oddsen Ends' [illegible] finger.

"Mind your eye," said Dennis Mince, and his eight pound hammer came down on Oddsen Ends' thumb.

"A cake walk, a mountain climb, or honey comb, or——"

"Watch out," said Dennis Mince, and his eight pound hammer came down on the riddle fiend's index finger, which, being the finger he was holding on by, caused him to lose his balance and he fell two hundred feet into a barrel of nails, which all being bent nails, broke his fall.

Marrying a Butterfly

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

"So you are getting along without a maid?" said Margie Folsom as she followed Ethel Gordon into the kitchen. "Do you like the freedom it gives you?"

"Freedom! Like it!" echoed Ethel, tennis at a park that is not considered respectable?

(4) I have been keeping steady company, but one evening I went to a movie show with another boy. Since then my steady company has acted cool. I asked him if he was angry and he said he wasn't. He said it was none of his business where I went or what I did. I went with the other boy just for spite to see if he cared for me. maids would fill a book."

"That is just it. Anyone is fortunate who can get along without one," chimed in Margie.

"But, my dear, you are fortunate in knowing how to do things. I am at the mercy of servants. You will see before you get away from here. Ralph was worried when he learned you were coming for fear you would starve to death while here." Margie laughed. "Really, it is no laughing matter. We live out of tin cans and tinned food grows monotonous. Then I hate housework and I have not been able to get even a girl to wash dishes for more than two weeks at a time. She gets a job in the beet factory or her natural craving for variety makes her go to another place."

"Tell me why you hate housework." Margie took her by the shoulders and turned her around so that she could look in her eyes.

"I do not like anything that has to be done over and over, day after day, the same old thing. Then——"

"But it is not the same old thing. Every day has something different. There are new dishes to try to cook. I never found housework monotonous because I am always planning some new and delightful scheme to work out in the way of decorating or arranging the furniture. Of course, as everything is new you have not come to that delightful work yet."

Ethel looked as if she were listening to a foreign language. "Then it makes the hands so rough and spoils the fingernails." She held out her dainty hands to corroborate her statement.

"You are fishing for a compliment, I see," laughed Margie, turning the hand over and looking at it minutely. "Aside from a burn or two there is nothing the matter with your hands. You have taken good care of this. It is not necessary to have rough hands even if you do housework. You can take care of them and have them look all right. So that argument is answered."

"Well, I do not like housework. It does not interest me," persisted Ethel.

"What does interest you?" queried Margie.

"I had such a good time as a girl that I am spoiled for any dull old town with nothing but drudgery to occupy me. I like the parties and luncheons, picture shows and theaters. I like society and pretty clothes, and——"

"Own up that you want to spend your life being amused; that you are indolent, and unwilling to take your place in the world as a woman of responsibility," broke in Margie.

"Why should a girl renounce all pleasure as soon as she is married?" flamed Ethel. "I am young, and why should life be over for me at my age?"

"Life over! What I am criticising is that life has not begun for you. You have not commenced to taste the joy of real living. You have still the child's attitude of having everything done for you and looking for amusement as an end in itself."

"I do not understand your attitude. I have enjoyed life, and I want to eat my fill of the bread of pleasure." Ethel walked away, leaving Margie looking wistfully after her with a sad shake of the head.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

By MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Letters may be addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) What is a good lotion for tanned hands and face?

(2) What will make me stop biting my finger nails?

(3) Will a girl get a bad reputation by playing stopping to stare at Margie. "You are joking, of course."

"Indeed, I am not, I never had a maid until my first baby came and I would not have one now if the children were older. I really think it is a great care to watch a maid and keep her from wasting and destroying, even if she is honest."

"Which mine have not been," interrupted Ethel. "What I have suffered from Does this show that he cares for me? Do you think I ought to drop him? I like him a lot better than the other boy.

(5) The girl that lives next to me is the talk of the town. She told me she got a bad reputation by going with almost any boy. Don't you think I ought to go with just one boy?

(6) Is it all right to go buggy riding or to a dance with a boy or should a chaperone go along?

(7) When a girl orders a certain kind of soda or sundae is the boy supposed to order the same?

(8) When going down the aisle in a show should the girl or the boy lead the way to the seats?

TOOTSIE.

(1) Cut a lemon in two and use half as a pad. Rub the juice over the tanned skin and let it dry on. If the skin becomes chapped the treatment should be omitted for a few days.

(2) Buy some quassia at the drug store and dip the tips of your fingers into it. Quassia is very bitter and will help you to remember not to bite your nails.

(3) A girl who values her reputation should not go to a place that is not considered respectable.

(4) The boy doesn't care very much for you or he wouldn't act cool and say that it is nothing to him where you go and what you do. You have no reason to drop him yet, but if he becomes disagreeably cool you will have reason to.

(5) A girl should choose her boy friends carefully and should do nothing that would make them or other people lose respect for her. I consider it bad policy to go with only one boy, because you are likely to take him too seriously.

(6) If you do nothing to cheapen yourself it is all right to go buggy riding or to a dance unchaperoned. Many people look upon buggy riding as a fine chance to "spoon." That is bad.

(7) No. (8) The girl.

* * *

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am taking care of two younger sisters. The younger is fourteen years of age and is a great deal of worry to me. She is very vain and thinks of nothing but her looks (she is attractive) and clothes. These are her main topics and I can find no way to change her ideas. What can you suggest?

C. H. B.

Your problem is indeed difficult. If your little sister gets the idea that you do not respect her views she will not respect yours. Take an interest in her clothes and help her to look just as attractive as you can. This will please her and make her more ready to follow your suggestions in other lines. Furnish good books for her to read and supply her with pretty materials with which to make clothes. An interest in dress can be made very profitable if the right course is taken.

* * *

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Do you believe in love at first sight? I passed a girl on the street and I loved her from the moment I saw her. She has wonderful blue eyes and the sweetest expression I have ever seen. I described her to some friends of mine and one of the girls said she knows who she is. This girl is going to introduce her to me. After I meet her will it be all right to ask her if I may call on her. I have never done so before without knowing a girl rather well.

T. F.

There are a great many cases of love at first sight, but such love is not lasting unless it is followed up by substantial acquaintance. After you have met the girl it will be all right to ask to call.

THE ILLUSION OF TONICS.

The popular medical delusions of today are the discarded practices and shattered theories of the physicians of yesterday. Fifty years ago the doctors actually believed that "rheumatiz" was caused by exposure, sleeping on the ground and general bad weather, that maliar was due to miasms rising from the ground of low or marshy places, and that diphtheria, scarlet fever and several other diseases affecting the throat were the result of inhaling "swer gas." One of the convictions of the old-time practitioner was that a run down condition," the state of convalescence or any indefinite illness characterized by weakness indicated the use of tonics. A tonic was something dispensed in a bottle to give the patient strength.

Is there really any drug or chemical or concoction of remedies capable of adding strength or energy to the body?

No.

Then what does "tonic treatment" mean?

It means whatever treatment the condition of the patient demands. Sometimes medicine, sometimes rest, sometimes exercise, sometimes open air, sometimes sunlight, sometimes massage, diet, electricity, reassurance, suggestion or just recreation.

Iron adds no energy or strength to the body, when given medicinally. It stimulates the blood manufacturing function in cases of anemia or weak blood in which that function is deficient. But the iron which really enters into the formation of the hemoglobin molecule, the coloring matter of the red cospuscles, is derived from ordinary foods, not from medicinal iron. There is less iron in the entire blood mass than a patient takes in a day or two of treatment with iron pills.

Strychnine and other bitter drugs tend to increase the appetite, but it is an open question whether an invalid profits by ingesting more food than the depraved system really can assimilate. Strychnine is popularly, and we fear professionally, supposed to add energy or ambition to the system weakened by illness, but that is a grave error. It does precisely what a whip does to a tired or sick horse. Strychnine excites the spinal nerves, but neither tones nor strengthens a weak heart. At best it is an emergency drug. At worst it is an illusion, a castigator of the nervous system, and a pernicious poison to keep in the house where children may possibly find it. What a load on the doctor's conscience if a little tot does happen to eat some of his unnecessary strychnine pills for the sugar coating on them!

Take the strychnine out of the scores of alleged tonics popularly used and what have you left? Sugar, alcohol, carmine or other coloring and a label. The label is the most wonderful part of the tonic.

QUESTIONS AND ANSEWERS.

This Is Alarming.

Question—Are you aware, doctor, writes a high school girl, that we read some of your Tealth Talks in our class and discussed them once a week? We like them for their literary drama as well as for their hygienic value.

Answer—We have instructed the publishers to remove from the subscription list all school teachers; students or others who know anything about grammar, literature, spelling, punctuation, etc. Thank you for the warning. But you make us nervous.

Retarding Wrinkles and Middle Age.

Question—Will the regular use of a good cold cream retard wrinkles, flabbiness of the fact and the other marks of midle age? If not, please give us a formula that will.

Answer—The cold cream won't do any harm, but there is a better foruula: Take night and morning, and if possible at noon also, two miles of oxygen, on the hoof. If it fails, we will refund the purchase price grudgingly.

Household Hints

CANNING AND PRESERVING.

To Can Peas or Any Vegetable—First sterilize jar perfectly. Shell, wash and drain young peas, place in glass jar, cover with slightly warm water and one teaspoon table salt to a pint can. Place on new rubber (also new cover if not a glass jar), fastening lightly. Now place jars on a false bottom (excelsior will do) in a wash-boiler, filling in cold water till jars are two-thirds covered with water. Cover boiler tightly and light fire. Let boil two hours when using pint jars and four hours when using quart jars. One bushel peas in pods equals twenty pint of finished product. One pint can holds just two cups—enough to serve four persons, and the liquid is delicious to use in serving. Twenty pint cans fill wash-boiler.

To Keep Peas for Winter—Shell peas and put in boiling water with a little salt added; boil five minutes, drain in colander, afterward dry on a cloth, then place them in airtight bottles. When you want to use them cook until tender.

For Easy Labeling of Jelly Glasses, Fruit Jars, Etc.—Go to a dealer in artists' materials and buy a china decorator's pencil. With it you can write on the glass itself or on the tin lids and mason caps as easily as with a lead pencil on paper. Washes off at end of season, leaving jar ready for another label.

Jelly Bag—Take a piece of cheesecloth twenty inches square, fold it three-cornered, French seam one side. Around the top sew four or five loops to hang it up by. You will find it handier than using a cord.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

When washing and rinsing colored materials, add one teaspoon Epsom salts to each gallon of water and even the most delicate shades will not run nor fade. Serge or merino dresses which have been dyed black can be safely washed in this way without any risk of the dye running.

When your front-laced corsets won't lace tightly to give the straight-front effect, cut down the back, sew two pieces of strong goods, one on each side (cut smaller at top so the bust won't be too large); sew two seams down the back to insert the small whalebone. You will have a pair of corsets to lace tightly in front.

Remove Fruit Stains—Put one ounce chloride of lime in a bowl, pour over it one pint, of boiling water, strain through muslin, add three pints cold water. Gather up stained spots, put in this solution; in a short time the stains will disappear. This is very successful in peach and grass stains; also mildew.

THE TABLE.

Chocolate Cookies—One and one-half cups light brown sugar, two eggs beaten light, one-half cup butter, one-half cup sour milk, one teaspoon soda dissolved in sour milk, pinch of salt, two squares bitter chocolate grated fine, one-fourth pound pecan nuts chopped medium fine, teaspoon of vanilla. After thoroughly mixed, beat batter about three minutes, as this makes them very light. Do not roll, but drop from the spoon (teaspoon preferred).

Salad Dressing Which Will Keep—Stir together four tablespoons sugar, two tablespoons flour, one teaspoon salt, two teaspoons prepared mustard. Cook this in 1½ cups water and half cup strong vinegar. Beat one egg thoroughly, stir slowly into dressing and cook again. Before setting aside to cool stir in one teaspoon olive oil and one teaspoon butter. Kept covered in a cool place this will keep two or three weeks and may be thinned with sweet milk and used as desired.

BERRY PUDDING.

One cup flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one heaping teaspoon baking powder, sweet milk to make a soft dough. Roll one one-half inch in thickness, spread thickly with either raspberries or blackberries, roll, put in floured cheese cloth, steam one hour. Serve with sweetened cream, flavored with grated nutmeg.

GINGLES' JINGLES

MY NEW MACHINE.

I've bought a new machine, makes me a muchly hated jay, for my demise or for my scalp a score doth nightly pray; for pleasant dreams and peaceful rest is more or less disturbed, by me and my machine, such noise before was never heard. They so relate, then whoop, a kick to night clerks o'er the 'phone, they say, "that guy next room has got a head of solid bone, if we had all the ivory hid within his nutty bean, in working togs and flivvers cheap we'd never more be seen." "But shift that bums' abode from here or we will beat it hence, we cannot sleep he's got our pelts now hanging on the fence." Yes I disturb a bunch of folks, upset them some I know, but fifty bucks is wasted and they don't on bushes grow; if I shall fail to hammer, to manipulate with vim my portable typewriter thus on it keep up in trim, just pound her up both night and day, beat up the thing for keeps, though some shall howl, some criticise, and some turn in the weeps.

SIDE TALKS

By RUTH CAMERON

THE LAST CHILD.

"How can I marry?" a woman said to me the other day. "I couldn't leave Father and Mother to shift for themselves, could I?"

She did not speak bitterly, just hopelessly. Not in resentment, but in a sort of apathy, sadder to me than any passion of rebellion.

Because She Isn't Married Is She Responsible?

She is the youngest of a family of four. The other three, two brothers and a sister, are all married. When they married their father was making a living, and their mother was in reasonably good health. Since then, his salary has dwindled and the mother has become a semi-invalid. The youngest daughter earns a good salary, which makes it financially possible to keep the old home open, and in her spare time she gives her mother the attention which her semi-invalid state requires.

The older children regard this as an ideal arrangement. Naturally!

A Man Who Wants to Marry.

I think we all know cases like this, in which the youngest child or the child who for one reason or another has remained at home after the others have left, is thrust by circumstances into the position of being responsible for the old folks. Usually it is a daughter, more rarely it is a bachelor son. There was a pathetic letter in one of the magazines recently, telling of the case of a son so placed, who wants to marry but does not feel like asking any woman to assume the care of his invalid mother. Has he brothers and sisters? Oh, yes, but they are married and it is, therefore, not their problem.

An Exasperating Case.

One of the most exasperating cases of unfairly divided responsibility that I ever knew was that of a woman who had two daughters. One of them married. She had no children and a comfortable income. The other was a stenographer. The mother in the last years of her life was an invalid and the unmarried daughter made a home for her, took care of her and did the housework on her return from her work. The other daughter may have contributed to her support, I don't know about that; but of the service that means as much as money she gave nothing. "I can't have my mother with me," she explained blandly. "I am living in a boarding house, and Mother wouldn't like that." The idea that she might go to housekeeping and take her mother apparently never occurred to her.

Not only the financial but also the personal responsibility for the older folks should be fairly and squarely divided among all the children, married and unmarried, according to their ability to help. Those who refuse to take their share, who need all their time and money for themsleves, are guilty of one of the least pardonable meannesses. The unmarried daughter, who gives up the best of her life to her invalid mother or father, has lost much. But not so much as the child who—deliberately shirks his share of this duty—and opportunity.

"Death is the door of life," he smiled. "I'm coming to that, but I've got to put you wise to a lot of things first. If you read your newspaper I guess you know the name of Constantine Karolides?"

I sat up at that, for I had been reading about him that very afternoon.

"He is the man that has wrecked all their games. He is the one big brain in the whole show, and he happens also to be an honest man. Therefore he has been marked down these twelve months past. I found that out—not that it was difficult, for any fool could guess as much—but I found out the way they were going to get him, and that knowledge was deadly. That's why I have had to decease."

He had another drink, and I mixed it for him myself, for I was getting interested in the beggar.

"They can't get him in his own land, for he has a bodyguard of Epirotes that would skin their grandmothers. But on the 15th day of June he is coming to this city. The British foreign office has taken to having international tea parties, and the biggest of them is due on that date. Now, Karolides is reckoned the principal guest, and if my friends have their way he will never return to his admiring countrymen."

"That's simple enough anyhow," I said. "You can warn him and keep him at home."

"And play their game?" he asked sharply. "If he does not come they win, for he's the only man that can straighten out the tangle. And if his government is warned he won't come, for he does not know how big the stakes will be on June 15."

"What about the British government?" I said. "They're not going to let their guests be murdered. Tip them the wink and they'll take extra precautions."

"No good. They might stuff your city with plain clothes detectives and double the police, and Constantine would still be a doomed man. My friends are not playing this game for fun. They want a big occasion for the taking off, with the eyes of all Europe on it. He'll be murdered by an Austrian, and there'll be plenty of evidence to show the connivance of the big folk in Vienna and Berlin. It will all be an infernal lie, of course, but the case will look black enough to the world.

"I'm not talking hot air, my friend.

"I happen to know every detail of the hellish contrivance, and I can tell you it will be the most finished piece of blackguardism since the Borgias. But it's not going to come off if there's a certain man who knows the wheels of the business alive right here in London on the 15th day of June. And that man is going to be your servant, Franklin P. Scudder."

I was getting to like the little chap. His jaw had shut like a rat trap, and there was the fire of battle in his gimlety eyes. If he was spinning me a yarn he could act up to it.

"Where did you find out this story?" I asked.

"I got the first hint in an inn on the Achensee in Tyrol. That set me inquiring, and I collected my other clews in a fur shop in the Galician quarter of Buda, in a Strangers' club in Vienna and in a little book shop off the Racknitzstrasse in Leipzig. I completed my evidence ten days ago in Paris.

"I can't tell you the details now, for it's something of a tale. When I was quite sure in my own mind I judged it my business to disappear, and I reached this city by a mighty queer circuit. I left Paris a dandified French-American, and I sailed from Hamburg a Jew diamond merchant.

"In Norway I was an English student of Ibsen, collecting materials for lectures. But when I left Bergen I was a moving picture man with special ski films. And I came here from Leith with a lot of pulpwood propositions in my pocket to put before the London newspapers. Till yesterday I thought I had muddied my trail some and was feeling pretty happy. Then"—

"He'll be murdered by an Austrian."

The recollection seemed to upset him, and he gulped down half a glass of whisky.

—"then I saw a man standing in the street outside this block. I used to stay close in my room all day and only slip out after dark for an hour or two. I watched him for a bit from my window, and I thought I recognized him. He came in and spoke to the porter. When I came back from my walk last night I found a card in my letter box. It bore the name of the man I want least to meet on God's earth."

I think that the look in my companion's eyes, the sheer naked fright on his face, completed my conviction of his honesty. My own voice sharpened a bit as I asked him what he did next.

"I realized that I was bottled as sure as a pickled herring and that there was only one way out. I had to die. If my pursuers knew I was dead they would go to sleep again."

"How did you manage it?"

"I told the man that valets me that I was feeling pretty bad, and I got myself up to look like death. That wasn't difficult, for I'm no slouch at disguises. Then I got a corpse—you can always get a body in London if you know where to go for it. I fetched it back in a trunk on the top of a four wheeler, and I had to be assisted upstairs to my room.

"You see, I had to pile up some evidence for the inquest. I went to bed and got my man to mix me a sleeping draft and then told him to clear out. He wanted to fetch a doctor, but I swore some and said I couldn't abide leeches. When I was left alone I started in to take up that corpse.

"He was my size and I judged had perished from too much alcohol, so I put some spirits handy about the place. The jaw was the weak point in the likeness, so I blew it away with a revolver. I dare say there will be somebody tomorrow to swear to having heard a shot, but there are no neighbors on my floor, and I guessed I could risk that.

"So I left the body in bed dressed up in my pajamas, with a revolver lying on the bedclothes and a considerable mess around. Then I got into a suit of clothes I had kept waiting for emergencies. I didn't dare to shave for fear of leaving tracks, and, besides, it wasn't any kind of use my trying to get into the streets.

"I had had you in my mind all day, and there seemed nothing to do but to make an appeal to you. I watched from my window till I saw you come home and then slipped down the stairs to meet you. There, sir, I guess you know about as much as me of this business."

He sat blinking like an owl, fluttering with nerves and yet desperately determined.

By this time I was pretty well convinced that he was going straight with me. It was the wildest sort of narrative, but I had heard in my time many steep tales which had turned out to be true, and I had made a practice of judging the man rather than the story. If he had wanted to get a location in my flat and then cut my throat he would have pitched me a far milder yarn.

"Hand me your key," I said, "and I'll take a look at the corpse. Excuse my caution, but I'm bound to verify a bit if I can."

CHAPTER II.

"Captain Theophilus Digby of the Seventh Goorkhas."

He shook his head mournfully. "I reckoned you'd ask for that, but I haven't got it. It's on my chain on the dressing table. I had to leave it behind, for I couldn't leave any clews to breed suspicions. The gentry who are after me are pretty bright eyed citizens. You'll have to take me on trust for the night, and tomorrow you'll get proof of the corpse business right enough."

I thought for an instant or two.

"Right! I'll trust you for the night. I'll lock you into this room and keep the key. Just one word, Mr. Scudder. I believe you're straight, but if so be you are not I should warn you that I'm a handy man with a gun."

"Sure!" he said, jumping up with some briskness. "I haven't the privilege of your name, sir; but let me tell you that you're a white man. I'll thank you to lend me a razor."

I took him into my bedroom and turned him loose.

In half an hour's time a figure came out that I scarcely recognized. Only his gimlety, hungry eyes were the same. He was shaved clean, his hair was parted in the middle, and he had cut his eyebrows!

Further: He carried himself as if he had been drilled and was the very model, even to the brown complexion, of some British officer who had had a long spell in India. He had a monocle, too, which he stuck in his eye, and every trace of the American had gone out of his speech.

"My hat! Mr. Scudder"— I stammered.

"Not Mr. Scudder," he corrected. "Captain Theophilus Digby of the Seventh Goorkhas, presently home on leave. I'll thank you to remember that, sir."

I made him up a bed in my smoking room and sought my own couch more cheerful than I had been for the past month. Things did happen occasionally even in this God forsaken metropolis.

I woke next morning to hear my man Paddock making the deuce of a row at the smoking room door.

Paddock was a fellow I had done a good turn to out on the Selakwi, and I had inspanned him as my servant as soon as I got to England. He had about as much gift of the gab as a hippopotamus and was not a great hand at valeting, but I knew I could count on his loyalty.

"Stop that row, Paddock," I said. "There's a friend of mine, Captain—Captain"— (I couldn't remember the name) "dossing down in there. Get breakfast for two, and then come and speak to me."

I told Paddock a fine story about how my friend was a great swell, with his nerves pretty bad from overwork, who wanted absolute rest and stillness. Nobody had got to know he was here or he would be besieged by communications from the India office and the prime minister, and his cure would be ruined.

I am bound to say Scudder played up splendidly when he came to breakfast.

He fixed Paddock with his eyeglass, just like a British officer; asked him about the Boer war and slung out at me a lot of stuff about imaginary pals of whom I had never heard. Paddock couldn't learn to call me "sir," but he "sirred" Scudder as if his life depended on it.

I left him with the newspaper and a box of cigars and went down to the city till luncheon. When I got back the porter had an important face.

"Nawsty business 'ere this morning, sir. Gent in No. 15 been and shot 'isself. They've just took 'im to the mortuary. The police are up there now."

I ascended to No. 15 and found a couple of bobbies and an inspector busy making an examination. I asked a few idiotic questions, and they soon kicked me out. Then I found the man that had valeted Scudder and pumped him, but I could see he suspected nothing.

He was a whining fellow with a churchyard face, and half a crown went far to console him.

I attended the inquest next day. A partner of some publishing firm gave evidence that the deceased had brought him wood pulp propositions and had been, he believed, an agent of an American business. The jury found it a case of suicide while of unsound mind, and the few effects were handed over to the American consul.

I gave Scudder a full account of the affair, and it interested him greatly. He said he wished he could have attended the inquest, for he reckoned it would be about as spicy as to read one's own obituary notice.

The first two days he stayed with me in that back room he was very peaceful. He read and smoked a bit and made a heap of jottings in a notebook, and every night we had a game of chess at which he beat me hollow.

I think he was nursing his nerves back to health, for he had had a pretty trying time.

But on the third day I could see he was beginning to get restless. He fixed up a list of the days till June 15 and ticked each off with a red pencil and made remarks in shorthand against them. I would find him sunk in a brown study, with his sharp eyes abstracted, and after these spells of meditation he was apt to be despondent.

Then I could see that he began to get edgy again. He listened for little noises and was always asking me if Paddock could be trusted. Once or twice he got very peevish and apologized for it. I didn't blame him.

I made every allowance, for he had taken on a fairly stiff job.

It was not the safety of his own skin that troubled him, but the success of the scheme he had planned. That little man was clean pluck all through, without a soft spot in him. One night he was very solemn.

"Say, Hannay," he said, "I judge I should let you a bit deeper into this business. I should hate to go out without leaving somebody else to put up a fight."

And he began to tell me in detail what I had only heard from him vaguely.

I did not give him very close attention. The fact is I was more interested in his own adventures than in his high politics. I reckoned that Karolides and his affairs were not my business, leaving all that to him.

So a lot that he said slipped clean out of my memory. I remember that he was very clear that the danger to Karolides would not begin till he had got to London and would come from the very highest quarters, where there would be no thought of suspicion. He mentioned the name of a woman, Julia Czechenyi, as having something to do with the danger.

She would be the decoy, I gathered, to get Karolides out of the care of his guards. He talked, too, about a Black Stone and a man that lisped in his speech, and he described very particularly somebody that he never referred to without a shudder, an old man with a young voice who could hood his eyes like a hawk.

He spoke a good deal about death too. He was mortally anxious about winning through with his job, but he didn't care a rush for his life.

"I reckon it's like going to sleep when you are pretty well tired out and waking to find a summer day, with the scent of hay coming in at the window. I used to thank God for such mornings 'way back in the blue grass country, and I guess I'll thank him when I wake up on the other side of Jordan."

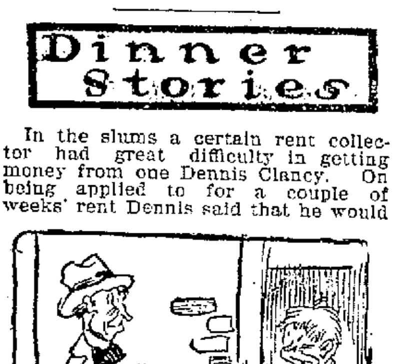
Dinner Stories

In the slums a certain rent collector had great difficulty in getting money from one Dennis Clancy. On being applied to for a couple of weeks' rent Dennis said that he would put, in a new cellar door. This was done and the collector called for the money. Dennis was out, but his eldest son paid the money that was due.



"Glad you have it ready for once," said the collector.

"Well, there it is," said the boy, "but we had awful trouble to raise it. We had to sell some of the furniture."

"I didn't know you had any furniture," said the collector as he pocketed the money.

"We hadn't much," said the boy. "Dad sold the new cellar door to get the coin."

"What do you suppose is the matter with those chickens?" asked the literary farmer.

"Well, I dunno," said his neighbor. "What do you feed 'em on?"

"Feed them!" exclaimed the literary farmer. "Why, I don't feed them at all."

"Then how'd you s'pose they was a-goin' to live?"

"I presumed," replied the literary person, "that the old hen had milk enough for them now."

John received two birthday presents in which he was particularly interested—a diary and a peashooter. He wrote in the diary faithfully every day and the peashooter he fired off on all occasions. One day his mother found the following terse record in the diary:

"Mundy cold and sloppy. Toosdy cold and sloppy. Wensdy cold and sloppy, shot grandmother."

Like All the Rest.

"I caught the street-car conductor who owes me money on the car platform last night." "Did you get your money?" "No; he did the same thing my other creditors do." "What's that?" "Put me off."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Would your skin stand this test?

The bright lights of an evening gathering show up mercilessly the defects of a poor complexion. But the regular use of makes it as easy to have a naturally beautiful skin as to cover up a poor one with cosmetics. It lessens the tendency to pimples, redness and roughness, and in a very short time the complexion usually becomes clear, fresh and velvety.

In severe or stubborn cases, Resinol Soap should at first be aided by a little Resinol Ointment. All druggists sell them.

Sincerity.

Sincerity is the most compendious wisdom and an excellent instrument for the speedy dispatch of business; it creates confidence in those we have to deal with, saves the labor of many inquiries, and brings things to an issue in a few words; it is like traveling in a plain beaten road which commonly brings a man sooner to his journey's end than byways.—Addison.

FOOD

Sometimes we wonder about the possibility of some other system of nourishment than eating food. Why isn't a man sufficient unto himself? Why should he want to eat an external dish of ice cream? Why should he think that a dish of ice cream should become John Jones instead of remaining a dish of ice cream? Of course the answer is easy; he has to. Science has proved that he has to eat or he starves, but why does he have to? Why shouldn't the man and the ice cream have been created one thing instead of two things, to start with? It is a good deal of bother to have to stop and eat so often. It takes time, it costs money, and it often results in indigestion.

In introducing his wife to another man, John Jones to be real exact should say: "This is Mrs. Jones—that is, this is Mrs. Jones up to the present moment. Come out into the garden and I will show you some potatoes which will soon be my wife. I want you to see them, because I don't want you to go away without meeting all the family."

Our system of nourishment might have all been different. For instance, we might have had onions instead of fingers—and been our own nourishment, just as an automobile to-day is its own self starter, and then we would not have had to depend on delicatessens. Nature seems to like to mix everything up. She likes to make horses out of hay, and persons out of pickles and things. Perhaps it makes the world more interesting, but sometimes it makes existence quite a troublous struggle.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, Monday, July 17, 1876—Barley is being harvested, and will yield well.

This forenoon the thermometer fell eighteen degrees in twenty minutes.

There is a lull in the centennial business of this city. Too hot to take in such a big thing.

Mr. Hunt, who has been running the Rock County House for several months, has abandoned his business.

Cooper Bailey & Co.'s circus train of twenty-seven cars passed through here this morning for Monroe where they show today.

The wrecking train on the Northwestern road was at work yesterday and completed the removal of the wreck four miles from the city. The engine was not damaged to any great extent.

The Whittier's Glen services were a success yesterday. About 400 persons were present to hear Mr. Jones deliver his excellent sermon on "Character."

Yesterday afternoon about five o'clock, a daughter, eleven years old, of Jacob Helger, a laborer in Buob's brewery, was engaged in gathering choke cherries on the bank of the river a short distance above the brewery. While the girl was in one of the trees, she lost her hold, fell upon the rocks, striking her head and producing a severe contusion, and thence rolling into the river. There is no doubt that the fall rendered her insensible. It was about thirty minutes from the time she fell into the water before physicians could be summoned to resusitate her. When they arrived, there was no sign of life.

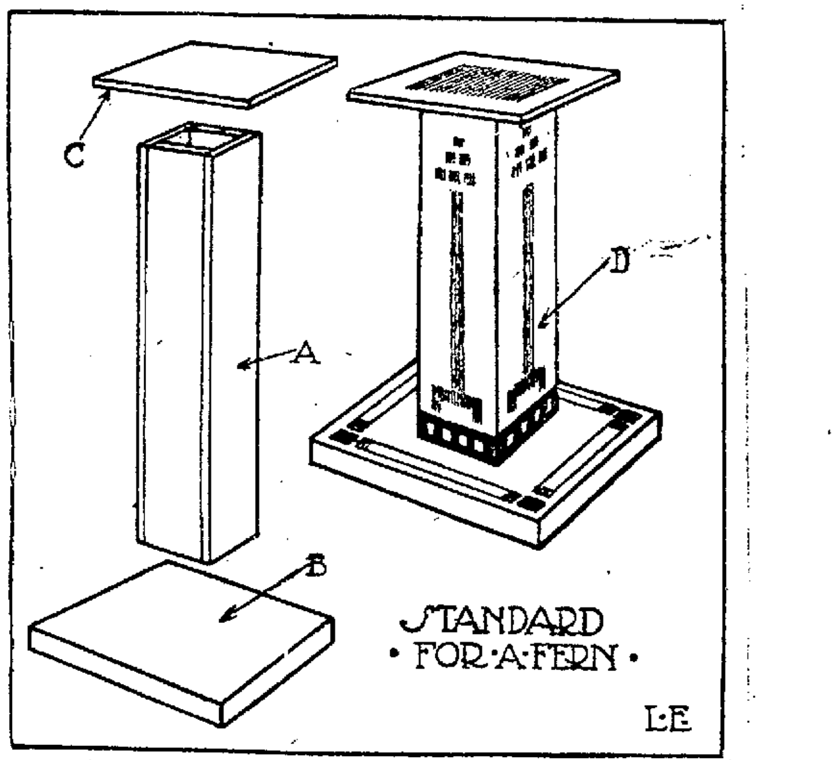
Something To Build



A Pedestal

Here is a diagram showing how you can make a pedestal on which to place a potted fern or some other plant that needs a substantial foundation.

For the section A an old porch pillar may be sawed the desired height. Two square pieces, B-C, about ten inches on a side, are nailed to bottom and top of pillar.

The bottom piece should be thicker than the top. (Two inches is a good thickness.) After all three parts are fastened securely, sandpaper and stain or paint. If the pedestal is to be used in the house, a bath-tub enamel may be used over a coat of white paint. The pedestal may be designed as suggested in the drawing D.

CARDS TRIM ELGIN; NEW PLAYERS SHOW FORM; SCORE IS 8-4

Watch City Team With Cy Boothby, Former Pittsburgher, Gives Janesville Team Little Opposition.

Elgin's semi-pro baseball aggregation with its erstwhile National league battery failed to be a handicap to the new Janesville Cardinals yesterday. Janesville won, 8-4.

Cy Boothby, former Pittsburgh southpaw might have at one time been good in the fast company of the majors but he has lost his old time form and offered little opposition to the Cards who had on their batting togs yesterday. Boothby was hit to all sections of the lot. The hits were well placed too and as a result the Cards experienced a great day on the bases. Eddie McDonough, the Elgin catcher, and a former Philadelphia National league man was at the receiving end of the Boothby and showed some classy playing. His wing was not as good as that of Hienemann, who caught Jack Wooton.

Moore, the third baseman secured by Manager Caldow from the Illinois Tool company, Chicago, team did not show up. A change was necessary and this proved highly effective. Ripley was shifted from center field to third base. Rip showed some pep on the third sack and got in good more than once with the stand by his playing. With the stick he was just as good, although suffering a little bad luck at times.

Whutet of Edgerton was at second for the Cards. The company was a little too fast for him, although he played the position fairly well. Hienemann's fast ones down to him were handled in good fashion, but the older heads with Elgin pulled quite a number of tricks at this sack.

Hornberg, the former Western Electric, Chicago, player is a find. The lad's a player from head to toe. He was out in the left garden yesterday and did some classy fielding. With the stick he was a whopper. First two times up he laced the horsehide for as many three baggers. The next time he drew a long and deep fly which looked like a homer, but Williams, the Elgin fielder, gathered it in after a great run and a sensational catch. Hornberg, in his fourth time at bat, got a single. The fans gave him the glad hand every time he was up, and safe to say, the Chicagoan made a lot of friends yesterday.

Thompson and Finn the Lawndale Blues, are valuable additions to the team and showed some good headwork yesterday. With the bat they did their share and like Hornberg, stood in good with the fans.

The visitors had a fairly well-balanced team, but the team against them yesterday was just a trifle better. The Cards outplayed the Elgin team all through and outguessed them just as much.

Jack Wooton went along chin up all the way. The Elgin batters did not give him much trouble and the support behind Wooton was excellent. Bolstered with this, his afternoon was a good one. Hienemann had some hard luck with the bat and pulled down but a single hit in four times up. Hiene was not discouraged, however, for the Card machine was working like clockwork and held the lead after they once started scoring.

The Beloit-Janesville series are this week. The first game is at the Fairies' park on Saturday afternoon. Big Red Ormsby, the sorrel topped spit ballist who hung the crepe on Lafferty last year, will be with the Cards to pitch the first game. The second will be played here on Sunday afternoon. Jack Wooton will again be in the box. Expectations here today are that the Fairies will pit Lafferty against Red in the first game. They want to take the opener and get a chance to see what they are able to do with Red this season.

The games Saturday afternoon and Sunday will be the big attractions in the local ball season. A big delegation of fans are planning to see the game at Beloit on Saturday. They want revenge for what the Fairies did to the Cards a couple of weeks ago.

Manager Caldow plans to further strengthen the Cards for Beloit. The announcement that he had revamped the lineup for Elgin Sunday caused considerable glee in the Line City last week.

MORRIS MILLER

It's pretty sure that in spite of denials, Charley Herzog's days as Cincinnati manager are numbered. There may come nothing of a deal with the Cubs, but sooner or later Charley will be replaced. There is very good material on the team—Heinie Groh, Hal Chase, Wingo, Toney, Schneider and Herzog himself are all stars—and yet the Reds languish in last place and seem to be a rather poor last at that. Somehow the managerial job in Cincy has a blight on it, as good men have tried before Herzog and all have passed it up. It has been reported that if Herzog leaves Hal Chase will run the team. Also Gerry Herrmann has expressed a desire to land Jack Hendricks of Indianapolis, the minor league managing star.

Previous to the Dillon-Moran fight there was a great deal heard from Charley Weinert, who demanded a bout with the winner, but since then Charley has been saying little at all. It begins to seem that he had Moran all picked to win, in which case Weinert would have a nice chance, as he has all of Moran's weight and probably could outbox him. But no one can blame Charley for not insisting on another fight with Dillon. Jack gave the Newark Adonis two of the niftiest trouncings one would wish to see.

William Johnston will appear in the east to guard his tennis honors this summer, which news has overjoyed the many tennis fans who had heard of his injury. Some while ago Johnston injured his back and it was thought at first he would be kept out of the game this season, but he appears to be thoroughly recovered. McLaughlin will also come east and Norris Williams is said to be in his best health once again and eager for the big fights. The remarkable improvement shown by George Church will also lend zest to the big tournaments at Newport, Seabright, Longwood, Southampton and the national tournament at Forest Hills.

It must be there was never anyone to get so great a rep without doing a thing as Fred Fulton. Everyone knows about him now and what can he do? He was lucky enough to be mentioned as a claimant for heavyweight honors and there's every reason to believe that if he had fought Willard the fight would have been a joke. He's on the stage now making good money, though it's hard to see how he can be an attraction. He is said to admit that he isn't an actor.

* * *

There has been proposed a convention of all the fight managers who at some time or other had Jess Willard in charge, but let him go to their later regret. If all the bugs who managed Willard at times and who were foolish enough to leave him before he won the title could be assembled they are said to be enough to crowd a fair-sized hall.

It seems that Kid Williams used poor judgment in beating up Benny McCoy so furiously. There was a number of other young bantamweights present who had hoped to have a chance at the champ, having learned that he was beginning to hit the slide. But after seeing him belabor Benny McCoy this idea seems to have been dispelled. One of them was Frankie Brown, a New York boy, and when it came to signing papers with Williams young Brown though agreeing on the weight made so many other objections that the fight was practically called off.

Fred Luderus, of the Phillies, says that Hans Wagner once made the greatest play he ever saw on the diamond. At a very critical point in a game between the Phillies and the Pirates, the Phils one run behind, Magee on base, Lobert hit a fly twenty feet behind second. Wagner chased back, never seeing the ball at all, but guided by his remarkable baseball instinct. He stuck out his mitt, the ball fell into it and after stumbling Wagner turned a complete somersault, but came up still holding the ball.

Joe Boehling, of the Washington Senators, says that until Nick Altrock suggested that he try overhand pitching the idea had never occurred to him. He has been a side-arm southpaw. The change of style was no trouble and with it Joe was able to get lots more results from his stuff. Now he seldom thinks of using the sidearm method.

Whitewater News

MAN OF 55 HANGS SELF IN BARN YESTERDAY

Whitewater, July 17.—Samuel Saukerson took his own life yesterday afternoon by hanging himself in Mark Johnson's barn, on the east side. A tie rope was used, fastened to a ring about three and a half feet from the floor. A noose was made and placed around the neck, and the victim got down on his knees and threw his weight forward until life was extinct from strangling. The body was found about 4:30, and Chief of Police McLane was summoned and the body cut down. Undertaker Coppins was called and the remains were taken into Mr. Johnson's house. Mr. Saukerson was a son of Mr. and Mrs. N. Saukerson, on the east side, and was a man of about fiftyfive years of age. The last two weeks he had been staying with Mr. Johnson, and the only cause for the deed was despondency. The deceased has lived in town several years moving here from the farm northeast of the city. He was unmarried.

Whitewater lost a hard fought ball game here yesterday in the ninth inning to Milwaukee by a score of 4 to 3. It was the local boys' game until the ninth, with a 3 to 2 lead. In this session Burke hit to left for two bases. Wittig fanned. Kruger out second to first. Burke scored on Brandt's hit through second. Rathcamp safe on error. Schultz hit to center, scoring Brandt. Miller drove to short, getting Schultz out at second. This defeat puts Whitewater in second place. The cause of defeat was in the outfield, where two flys could have been caught if men had been in proper position.

Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman of Janesville made a short visit at Will Brown's here Sunday.

Miss Viola Zelie of Milwaukee is visiting friends here.

Mrs. S. Bullock is visiting relatives in Janesville for a few days.
